1 Recollection and its benefits

1.1 MEANING OF ANUSSATI. In Pali, the recollection of the Buddha is called Buddhānussati, where “recollection” is anussati, resolved as anu-, a prefix here meaning, “repeatedly” and “following after” (in the sense of intentness), plus sati, “memory” or “mindfulness.” The connotation of sati as “memory” is especially central in the practice of the 6 recollections, that is, the recollections of the Buddha, of the Dharma, of the Sangha, of one’s moral virtue, of one’s charity, and of deities.2

On a higher level, recollection occurs in the connection with “direct knowledge” (abhiññā) gained through deep concentration, that is to say, the recollection of past lives. In the (Saṅgha) Uposatha Sutta (A 4.190), on the spiritual benefits of being a noble disciple, the Buddha declares of the monks in his order, thus:

Bhikshus, there are monks in this community of monks who dwell having attained the state of devas ... the state of brahmās ... the imperturbable3 ... the state of noble ones.

(A 4.190.3-6/2:184) = SD 15.10b

What is interesting here is that these monks are not reborn into those states, but they are dwelling in those divine states in their present lives as monks. This is the great benefit of the recollections: they help on attain to higher mental states in this life itself, and which facilitate one’s mental training towards liberation.

1.2 FOLLOWING THE SAINTS’ EXAMPLE. However, even if one is not yet a saint, one can still emulate them. This is exactly the message of the (Tadah’) Uposatha Sutta (A 3.70), where the Buddha exhorts the lady Visākhā to keep the eight precepts, just as the saints do, taking this as her inspiration:

(1) As long as they live, the arhats, giving up harming any living being, abstaining from harming any living being, having laid aside rod and sword, conscientious, kind, dwell compassionate towards all living beings.

Today I, too, for this night and this day, giving up harming any living being, abstaining from harming any living being, having laid aside rod and sword, conscientious, kind, dwell compassionate towards all living beings.

I will emulate the arhats in this manner and the observance will be kept by me.

(A 3.70.9/1:211) = SD 4.18

This is reflected in similar manner for the other seven precepts:

(2) giving up taking the not-given;
(3) giving up incelibacy;
(4) giving up false speech;

1 This work is gratefully dedicated to Ven Soorakkulame Pemaratana of Sri Lanka, who requested me to research into the terms attha, veda dhama, veda, that led to this sutta study. May there be more such renunciants to inspire us into Sutta study and Dharma practice.
3 The “imperturbable” (anīñjita) is a canonical term for the 4th dhyana and the 4 formless attainments. See Mahā Suññata S (M 122.9d/3:112), SD 11.4 Intro (3.1) & Laṭukikōpama S (M 66.22-34/1:454-456), SD 28.11; also MA 3:171.

(5) giving up strong drinks, distilled drinks, fermented drinks, that which causes heedlessness;
(6) eating only one meal a day;
(7) abstaining from dancing, singing, music,4 watching unseemly shows, and from wearing and adorning themselves with garlands, scents and cosmetics;5 and
(8) giving up high and luxurious beds.

Such a practice is very conducive to mindfulness and meditation. Here, one’s life is cleared of many distractions, and happily reduced to essentials, so that one can easily direct spiritual training.

1.3 Beneficial Use of the Past. In mindfulness and meditation practices, especially in the breath meditation,6 we are often told to keep our minds in “the present moment.” Earlier on,7 we noted how the unawakened mind is often ruled by latent tendencies, which are effectively the continuing “presence” of past karma that reinforces itself. In other words, this kind of mind is ruled by the past: one tends to miss the past, or to regret it, or to be depressed because of it, look at others as we knew them in the past, or simply live in the past. Spiritual evolution, however, entails that we learn from our past in making the same mistakes again and not continuing to reinforce an unwholesome life-style.

The past can benefit the present, especially when the past is a wholesome one, that is, when one’s memory is rooted in a wholesome subject. This is the basis of the recollections, which are not exercises in reminiscing the past but of keeping in mind wholesome qualities that help one to brighten up with faith and joy that are conducive to mental focus. Such recollection exercises are especially effective and beneficial for those meditating or doing mindfulness exercises who are faith-inclined.

2 The 6 recollections

2.1 Chapter 7 of the *Visuddhi-magga,*8 on the 6 recollections [§§2-7], alludes to the (Agata,phala) Mahānāma Sutta at least ten times.9 The conclusion to the same chapter10 mentions a number of discourses related to these practices, and as such should be studied with the (Agata,phala) Mahānāma Sutta (which, in fact, is the main text alluded to in that chapter). The suttas mentioned (besides the (Agata,-phala) Mahānāma Sutta) are as follows:

- Gedha Sutta (A 6.25/3:312)
  - The 6 recollections helps remove attachment [cupidity] (gedha), a term for the 5 cords of sensual pleasure. This discourse is also known as the (Saṅkhitta) Anussati Sutta, since it only briefly lists the 6 meditations, which are explained in detail in the (Vitthāra) Anussati Sutta (A 6.25/3:312-314).11
- Sambādh’okāsa Sutta (A 6.26/3:314 f)
  - “It is marvellous how the attainment of ‘the open’ (okāsa) in the stifling [closed] (sambādha)12 has been discovered by the Blessed One …” (spoken by Mahā Kaccāna).
- (Tad’ah’) Uposatha Sutta (A 3.70/1:206-211) = SD 4.18
  - The benefits of keeping the precept day. All of the 6 recollections, except cāgānuussati, are mentioned. With these recollections, “This soiled mind, Visākhā, is cleansed in a proper way …” Paragraphs are given in each case.

(Anussati) Mahānāma Sutta (A 11.12/5:328-332) The 5 spiritual faculties (faith, effort, mindfulness, concentration, wisdom) are the preconditions for the successful practice of the 6 recollections.

2.2 The section then closes with an account of how a meditating monk in ancient Sri Lanka, on seeing the Buddha figure conjured up by Māra, reflects:

How beautiful (sobhati) this appears, despite its having greed, hate and delusion! How more beautiful is the Blessed One himself: for he is quite without greed, hate and delusion!

(Vism 7.128/228)

Reflecting thus, zest arises in him, and in due course, cultivating insight, he attains arhathood.

2.3 The (Agata,phala) Mahānāma Sutta is very close to the Sambādh’okāsa Sutta (A 6.26). Here, in the (Agata,phala) Mahānāma Sutta, the teacher is the Buddha himself, addressing the layman Mahānāma. In the Sambādh’okāsa Sutta, the teacher is Mahā Kaccāna, addressing the monks. Besides these discourses, there are also other recollection-related texts, such as the Dhajagga Sutta (S 11.3), where the Buddha explains the recollection on the 3 jewels.

3 The recollections and dhyana

3.1 THE STRAIGHT MIND. For each of the 6 recollection exercises [2], it is said here that when the practitioner (“noble disciple”) has (even temporarily) overcome greed, hate and delusion through the recollection, “his mind is straight” (aju, gata, cittati), fully focussed on the meditation object, and the following stages are then stated in this refrain:

Mahānāma, a noble disciple whose mind is straight gains inspired knowledge of the meaning (attha, veda), gains inspired knowledge of the Dharma (dhamma, veda), gains gladness connected with Dharma (dhammūpasanīhita pāmuja);
 when he is gladdened, zest (pīti) is born;
 when the mind is zestful, the body is tranquil (kāyo passambhati);
 the tranquil body feels happy (sukham vediyati);
 when one is happy, the mind becomes concentrated (samādhiyati). [§§2-7]

3.2 FOR THE FAITH-INCLINED. As this passage shows, reflection on the Buddha and the other meditation objects culminates in mental concentration, yet the nature of this concentration is not stated by way of the dhyana formula. In the Nikāyas, such recollection practices are never shown to have the efficacy of inducing dhyana. The Commentaries clearly say that because such meditation objects involve intense use of discursive thought (vicāra), they can lead only as far as access concentration (upacāra, samādhi).

13 A 6.26/3:314-317 (SD 15.7a).
14 S 11.3/1:218-220 (SD 15.5).
15 Comys speak of 3 kinds of “concentration” (samādhi) or “cultivation” (bhāvanā) in connection with 3 kinds of “sign” or “image” (nimitta). Here, nimitta refers to a mental image or mental reflex obtained in meditation. The meditation object perceived at the beginning of meditation is called the “preparatory image” or “counterpart sign” (parikamma nimitta). At a preliminary level of concentration, the mind sees an unsteady and unclear image, called the “acquired image” (uggaha nimitta). With a higher degree of concentration, the “counter-image” (paṭibhāga nimitta) appears. As soon as this arises, in certain meditation, one is said to have attained “access (or neighbourhood) concentration” (upacāra samādhi), which is also called “access cultivation” (upacāra bhāvanā), so called because it is approaching but not yet attained the first dhyana. The mental focus present during dhyana is called “attainment concentration” (appanā samādhi). The 3 kinds of “sign” (nimitta) are: (1) preliminary sign (parikamma nimitta); (2) acquired sign (uggaha nimitta); and (3) counter-image (paṭibhāga nimitta) (Abhs 9.5/197; Vism 125). The 3 kinds of concentration or samadhi are: (1) momentary Samadhi (khaṇika samādhi), (2) access samadhi (upa-
It thus seems that the type of concentration typically available to a lay noble disciple at the stage of stream-entry or once-returning is access concentration. This, of course, does not mean that stream-enterers and once-returners don’t attain the Jhānas, but only that the standard doctrinal structure does not ascribe the Jhānas to them as essential equipment. (Bodhi 2001:53 f)

3.3 THE INSPIRING MEDITATIONS. The 6 recollections do not bring the meditation to the level of dhyana because the mental objects of these meditations are “static,” in the sense that we recall or visualize some quality of, say, the Buddha. It can easily be a discursive exercise, somewhat like a mentally focused form of prayer. This works well for those whose spiritual faculty is predominantly that of faith (saddhā).

For such practitioners, such a meditation easily evokes pious joy (veda) or even zest (pīti), and perhaps some depth of samadhi, but no dhyana. Even then, this can be quite a profound religious experience for those who have not tasted dhyana, or who would like to try a simpler meditation practice than the more demanding one leading to dhyana.

In fact, the joy evoked by any of the 6 recollections can well serve as a springboard, for those inclined to do so, to a deeper meditation as a basis for dhyana, or simply as a means of overcoming any mental hindrances. For this vital reason, this set of 6 recollections is popularly known as “the inspiring meditations.”

4.1.1.10 Attha,veda and Dhamma,veda

4.1.1.10 Attha,veda and Dhamma,veda

4.1.1.10 The (Agata,phala) Mahānāma Sutta (A 6.10), contains a puzzling pair of terms—\textit{attha,veda} and \textit{dhamma,veda}—in this context:

\begin{alltt}
Uju,gata,citto kho pana Mahānāma ariya,sāvako labhati attha,vedam, labhati dhamma,vedam,
labhati dhammûpasaññhitam pāmujjam ...
\end{alltt}

[A noble disciple who practises any of the 6 recollections “straightens” his mind, that is, keeps it directly focussed on the meditation object.]

Mahānāma, a noble disciple whose mind is straight gains inspired knowledge in the goal (\textit{attha,veda}),

\begin{alltt}
\textit{dhamma,veda} \textit{pā\textsuperscript{r}i\textsuperscript{i} \textit{nissāya uppanna} \textit{pīti,pamojjān} \textit{.}} \end{alltt}

gains inspired knowledge in the truth \[\textit{[the Dharma]}\] (\textit{dhamma,veda}), gains gladness connected with Dharma; …

(A 6.10,2/3:285,11-12, 27, etc)

4.1.2 The Aṅguttara Commentary is equally, if not more, puzzling, with these explanations:

\textit{Attha,veda} means the zest and gladness arising on account of the Commentaries [sic].

\textit{Dhamma,veda} means the zest and gladness arising on account of the Texts (\textit{pā\textsuperscript{r}i\textsuperscript{i}}) [sic].

\textit{cāra samādhi}, and (3) attainment samadhi (\textit{appānā samādhi}) (DhsA 117; Vism 144). \textbf{The 3 kinds of cultivation (bhāvanā)—}prepapatory cultivation (\textit{parikamma bhāvanā}), access cultivation (\textit{upacāra bhāvanā}) and attainment (or absorption) cultivation (\textit{appānā bhāvanā})—are given at Abhs 9.4/197. Understandably, this one-sidedly academic statement, clearly out of character with early Buddhism, reflects the mood of Buddhaghosa’s Mahāvihāra mediaeval scholasticism that tends to place the study and protection of scripture as text, above its spirit, practice and realization. This tradition seems to persist to this day in Sinhala Buddhism, especially amongst its clergy.

4.2 FAITH AND WISDOM

4.2.1 The terms atha, veda and dhamma, veda also appear in the Vatthūpama Sutta (M 7), whose commentary is more helpful. The Majjhima Commentary here explains veda as the joy and knowledge connected with that joy, saying:

... Atha, veda ti avecca-p, pasādāni paccavakkhato uppannaṃ vuttappakāram eva vedaṃ.
Dhamma, veda ti avecca-p, pasādassa hetum odsiso kilesa-p, pahānaṃ paccavakkhato uppannaṃ vuttappakāram eva vedaṃ ti evam pi ettha athho veditabbo.

... Atha, veda is the inspired knowledge (veda) arisen in one who reviews his wise faith; dhamma, veda is the inspired knowledge arisen in one who reviews the abandonment of the defilements in part (odsiso), the cause of that wise faith. The meaning here should known thus.
(MA 1:173 f)

4.2.2 The term veda means “text or scripture” (gantha) in the brahminical sense, and “spiritual knowledge” (nāma) in the Buddha sense. Here (in the compounds atha, veda dhamma, veda), however, veda has both the cognitive and the affective connotations, hence “inspired knowledge,” or even “joyful knowledge.” Of course, the terms “cognitive” and “affective” refer to modern western academic categories, but suffice it to say here that this spiritual knowledge encompasses both the experiential or knowing (sense-based) aspects as well as the positive feeling aspects by way of wholesome joy.

Hence, atha, veda refers to the clear understanding of the atha—the purpose and the benefit—of the spiritual life, an understanding resulting from a “straight mind” (uju, gata, citta), that is, we are easily directed to the meditation object and a mindfulness trained on the path to liberation. All this generates an unshakable faith rooted in some level of direct seeing of reality, and as such describes the main quality of a faith-follower (saddhā ‘nusārī) streamwinner.

In the same context, we see dhamma, veda as referring to a deep understanding of the Dharma as wisdom (seeing the true nature of existence). While atha here refers to a faithful’s vision and discovery of the path towards liberation, feeling quite content just to begin journeying on it, the dhamma refers to our careful examining and analysis of the terrain and structure of this path, even mapping it. Hence, dhamma, veda refers to the main quality of a truth follower (dhammānusārī) streamwinner.

4.2.3 The (Anicca) Cakkhu Sutta (S 25.1) declares these two individuals—the faith follower and the Dharma follower—as potential streamwinners, having 22 One who is filled with resolution (adhimokkha) and, in considering the formations as impermanent, gains the faculty of faith, at the path-moment of streamwinning, is called faith follower (Vism 21.74-78/659 f).

23 One who is filled with wisdom (pāññā) and, in considering the formations as not self, gains the faculty of wisdom, at the moment of streamwinning, is called a truth (or Dharma) follower (Vism 21.74-78/659 f).

4.3 CANONICAL CLUES

4.3.1 The two terms—\textit{attha,veda} and \textit{dhamma,veda}—appear in at least four other suttas in very similar context, that of using the recollections of the Buddha or the 3 Jewels as meditation practice:

4.3.1.1 The Mahā Gopālaka Sutta (M 33):

\begin{quote}
\begin{footnotesize}
Idha bhikkhave bhikkhu Tathāgata-p,pavedite dhamma,vinaye desiyamāne labhati attha,veda,
labhati dhamma,vedaṁ,
labhati dhammūpasaḥitaṁ pāmujaḥ ...
\end{footnotesize}
\end{quote}

Here, bhikshus, a monk, when the Dharma-Vinaya [the doctrine and the discipline] of the Tathagata is being taught,

\begin{itemize}
  \item gains inspired knowledge in the goal,
  \item gains inspired knowledge in the truth [the Dharma],
  \item gains gladness connected with Dharma;
\end{itemize}

(M 33.10/1:221,80, 33.22/1:224,2-3)

4.3.1.2 The Kosambiya Sutta (M 48):

\begin{quote}
\begin{footnotesize}
Balatā esā bhikkhave diṭṭi,sampannassa puggalassa yaṁ Tathāgata-p,pavedite dhamma,vinaye desiyamāne labhati attha,vedaṁ,
labhati dhamma,vedaṁ,
labhati dhammūpasaḥitaṁ pāmujaḥ ...
\end{footnotesize}
\end{quote}

This, bhikshus, is the strength of that person endowed with vision [right view]: when the Dharma-Vinaya [the doctrine and the discipline] of the Tathagata is being taught,

\begin{itemize}
  \item gains inspired knowledge [inspiration] in the goal,
  \item gains inspired knowledge in the truth [the Dharma],
  \item gains gladness connected with Dharma;
\end{itemize}

\textsuperscript{24} “True persons,” \textit{sappurisa}, also “superior persons,” also “virtuous person,” “ideal person”; often syn with “noble disciple,” \textit{ariya,sāvaka}, but here clearly includes those, although not yet on the path, but assure of it, viz the faith-follower and the truth-follower. The qualities of the \textit{sappurisa} are given at D 33.2.2(6)/3:252, 34.1.8(7)/3:283; M 113; A 7.64/4:113, 8:38/4:144 f & at M 110.14-24/3:23 f.

\textsuperscript{25} “Worldling,” \textit{puthujjana}, ie “born of the crowd”; more fully called “uninstructed worldling,” one unskilled (akovida), ie, lacks theoretical knowledge of the Dharma, and is undisciplined (avīṇita), and also lacks practical training in the Dharma. He is not a “seer of the noble ones” (ariya,dassavī), ie, of the Buddha and the noble disciples (the saints), because he lacks the wisdom-eye that discerns the truth they have seen. “Noble ones” (ariya) and “true persons” (\textit{sappurisa}) are synonymous. Cf “instructed noble disciple” at §11. MA 1:20-25; SA 2:98-101, 2:251 f; AA 1:61-63; Nc 75-78; Pm 2:445-449; DhsA 348-354.

\textsuperscript{26} \textit{Abhabbo taṁ kammanā katva yaṁ kammanā katvā nirayanaṁ vā tiracchānaṁ,yoninā vā petti,visayaṁ vā upajjeyya, Abhabbo ca tāva kālam kātum vāva na sotāpatti,phaḷam sacchikaroti}. This is the sutta’s key statement and clearly refers to what, after the Buddha’s time, is referred to as a “lesser streamwinner” (culla,sotāpanna, cullaka,sotāpanna). See \textbf{Entering the stream}, SD 3.3 (6).
4.3.1.3 The (Anussati) Mahānāma Sutta (A 11.12):

… Tathāgataṁ ārabbha, uju, gata, citto kho pana mahānāma ariya, sāvako labhati attha, vedam, labhati dhamma, vedam, labhati dhammāpasanāhi taṁ pāmujaṁ ...

… the noble disciple, Mahānāma, having directed his mind to the Tathagata, his mind that is straight gains inspired knowledge in the goal, gains inspired knowledge in the truth [Dharma],

gains gladness connected with Dharma; ...

(A 11.12/5:329, 320, 4 f)

4.3.2 Veda, jātā

4.3.2.1 The term veda, with the same sense as used in attha, veda dhamma, veda, is found in the sentence ye veda, jātā vicaranti loke, and found in these two discourses:

Suppayāsa Sutta (A 4.57/2:63): “… and gladsome roam the world” (A:W 2:72); Daddāha Vīmāna Vatthu (Vv 34.26/50): “Those who fare in the world with joy arisen” (Vv:H 71).

4.3.2.2 The Commentaries gloss veda, jātā invariably as “filled with bliss” or “blissful”: tuṭṭhi, jātā (AA 3:97), sañjāta, somanassā (BA 85), jāta, somanassā (VvA 156). The Saṅyutta Commentary explains it as hāsa, bahulo, pāmojja, bahulo, “much laughter, much gladness” (SA 1:120).27 Interestingly, in the Sarakāni Sutta 1 (S 55.24), the Buddha describes an arhat in this manner:

Here, Mahānāma, a certain person has wise faith28 in the Buddha, in the Dharma and in the Saṅgha. He is one of joyous wisdom (hasa, paññā), of quick wisdom,29 and liberated.

4.3.2.3 Here, “joyous wisdom,” hāsa, paññā, can also be translated as “laughing wisdom” (hāsa means “laughter, mirth, joy”). “Here one with much joy [laughing], mirth, contentment and gladness perfects the virtues: this is joyous wisdom” (Pm 21.17/2:199 f). The Commentaries speak of the arhat’s wisdom as “joyous wisdom” (hasa, paññā), “quick wisdom” (javana, paññā), sharp wisdom (tikkha, paññā, as it cuts off all defilements), and “penetrating wisdom” (nibbedhika, paññā) by which one maintains dispassion toward all formations.30

4.3.2.4 The “inspired knowledge” (veda) mentioned in the above contexts is no ordinary or worldly knowledge, but one arising as a result of meditation and mindfulness, that is to say, “the wisdom of cultivation” (bhāvanā, mayā paññā).31 This cultivation wisdom is closely connected with the attha, veda dhamma, veda passages, as evident in this Vatthūpama Sutta (M 7) passage:

27 Cf the smile-producing consciousness or “mirth-producing consciousness” (hāsit’ uppāda, citta), mentioned in Abhidhammattha Saṅgaha, referring to a kind of functional consciousness independent of karma, found only in arhats (Abhs:BRS 1.10, 2.28, 3.17, 18, 21, 4.27; Abhs:SR 86 n1, 162; Abhs:WG 25, 85, 86, 91, 105, 109, 113, 115, 116, 117, 156, 239, 240, 306).

28 “Wise faith,” avecca-pasāda, ie faith or confidence through understanding. See sutta §1 def of faith.

29 “Of quick wisdom,” javana, paññā. This refers to one who quickly understands that the five aggregates are all impermanent, suffering and not self (Pm 21.18/2:200). See prev n.

31 The 3 kinds of wisdom (paññā) are: (1) the wisdom of reflection (cintā, mayā paññā) or philosophical knowledge; (2) the wisdom of hearing (suta, mayā paññā, lit “wisdom heard”), or academic knowledge; and (3) the wisdom of cultivation (bhāvanā, mayā paññā), or spiritual insight (D 3:219; Vbh 324). Apparently they are not mentioned anywhere else in the Canon, and the Comys list suta, mayā paññā first. The set however is found in Buddhist Skt works, eg Abdhk 334. Vibhaṅga defs the wisdom of reflection as receptivity [openness] to knowledge not gained
When that monk is endowed with wise faith in the Buddha, ... in the Dharma, ... in the Sangha, he gains inspired knowledge in the goal, he gains inspired knowledge in the truth [the Dharma], he gains gladness connected with Dharma; ...

(M 7/8:1:37,30-31, 34, 1:38,1-3, SD 28.12)

4.3.2.5 Here, wise faith (avecca-p, pasāda) leads to “inspired knowledge” (veda) in the spiritual goal and the Dharma. As stated below, “wise faith” is inspiration or confidence, based on some level of understanding or wisdom (avecca), and characterized by lucid joy (pasāda).

4.4 The Upanisā Sutta

4.4.1 This assertion is further supported by the Upanisā Sutta (S 12.13) in its formula of the spiritual or supramundane cycle, thus:

faith (saddhā) is the immediate cause of joy, joy [gladness] (pāmojja) is the immediate cause of zest, dezt (pīti) is the immediate cause of tranquillity, tranquillity (passaddhi) is the immediate cause of happiness, happiness (sukha) is the immediate cause of concentration, concentration (samādhi) is the immediate cause of knowledge and vision of things as they really are, knowledge and vision of things as they really are is the immediate cause of revulsion, revulsion [disenchantment] is the immediate cause of dispassion, dispassion [letting go of craving] is the immediate cause of release, release is the immediate cause of the knowledge of the destruction [of the cankers]. (S 12.23.26/2:31)

4.4.2 Here we see faith (saddhā) heading the list, followed by zest (pīti), tranquillity (passaddhi), happiness (sukha) and concentration (samādhi). All the underscored terms are found in the (Agata, phala) Mahānāma Sutta in their verb form, thus:

The Upanisā Sutta (S 12.13) | The (Agata, phala) Mahānāma Sutta (A 6.10)
joy [gladness] (pāmojja) | “he gains gladness (pāmuja) connected with Dharma ...”

zest (pīti | “when he is gladdened, zest is born” (pamuditassa pīti jāyati)

tranquillity (passaddhi) | “when the mind is zestful, the body is tranquil” (pītimanassa kāyo passambhati)

happiness (sukha) | “the tranquil body feels happy” (passaddha, kāyo sukha vediyati)

concentration (samādhi) | “when one is happy the mind becomes concentrated” (sukhino cittaṃ samādhiyati)

4.4.3 In the attha, veda dhamma, veda formulas, we find in its place, the practice of the recollections, which understandably generates faith in the practitioner, by way of leading him to “the wisdom of culti-... vation” (bhāvanā, mayā paññā), that goes on to instill him with gladness, zest, and so on until finally spiritual release through the destruction of the mental cankers (as shown in the Upanisā Sutta formula here).

The Discourse on Mahānāma (on the fruition-attainer)
A 6.10

The 4 limbs of the streamwinner

1 At one time, the Blessed One was staying in Nigrodha’s Park at Kapilavatthu. Then Mahānāma the Sakya approached the Blessed One, saluted him, and sat down at one side. Seated thus as one side, he said this to the Blessed One:

“Bhante, how does a noble disciple continuously dwell when he has attained the fruit and understood the teaching?”

“Mahānāma, when a noble disciple has attained the fruit and understood the teaching, he continuously dwells in this way:

(1) Faith in the Buddha.

Here, Mahānāma, a noble disciple recollects the Tathagata, thus: ‘The Blessed One is such: he is arhat, fully self-awakened one, accomplished in wisdom and conduct, well-farer, knower of worlds, peerless guide of persons to be tamed.’

34 Yo so bhante ariya, savāko āgata, phalo viññāta, sāsano, so katamena vihārena bahulaṁ viharati ti. Comy: “Has attained the fruit” (agata, phala) means that he has realized the threefold training (in moral virtue, mental concentration, and wisdom). He asks about the streamwinner’s living in dependency (tutelage) (nissaya, vihāra), ie his habitual spiritual practice (AA 3:337 f). See Puññābhisaṃda S (A 4.52/2:56 f), on the 4 limbs of a streamwinner (sotāpannassata angañi); see also D 3.11.1(14)/3:227 + SD 3.3(4).

35 This is the streamwinner’s “wise faith” (aveccā-pu. pasāda). This is a syntactical cpd with aveccā (Skt avetya) absolute of *aveti, “he undergoes, knows, experiences.” [On syntactical cpds, see K R Norman, 1991a:3.] There are 2 kinds of faith (saddhā): (1) “rootless faith” (amūlikā, saddhā), baseless or irrational faith, blind faith. (M 2:170); (2) “faith with a good cause” (ākāravati, saddhā), faith founded on seeing (M 1:320,8, 401,23). “Wise faith” is syn with (2). Amūlaka = “not seen, not heard, not suspected” (V 2:243 3:163 & Comy). Gethin speaks of 2 kinds of faith: the cognitive and the affective (eg ERE: Faith & Jayatilleke, Early Buddhist Theory of Knowledge, 1963: 387): “Faith in its cognitive dimension is seen as concerning belief in propositions or statements of which one does not—or perhaps cannot—have knowledge proper (however that should be defined); cognitive faith is a mode of knowing in a different category from that knowledge. Faith in its affective dimension is a more straightforward positive response to trust or confidence towards something or somebody…the conception of saddhā in Buddhist writings appears almost, if not entirely affective, the cognitive element is completely secondary.” (Gethin 2001:107; my emphases). The streamwinner’s faith is defined in Vimanisaka S (M 47) as “his faith is strong, supported by reasons, rooted in vision” (ākāra, vāti saddhā dassana, mūlikā dalhā, M 47,16/1:320).

37 Here begins the nine virtues of the Buddha (navārāha, guṇa) (M 1:37; A 3:285).

38 Purisa, damma sārathi. Here –damma (adj) is grd, meaning “to be tamed or restrained,” often spoken of a young bullock (M 1:225, bala, gāvā damma, gāvā, “the strong cattle and cattle to be tamed,” ie bulls and young teacher of gods and humans, awakened, blessed.

2.2 Mahānāma, when the noble disciple recollects the Tathagata thus, his mind is not obsessed by lust, not obsessed by hate, not obsessed by delusion. At that time, his mind is straight, inspired by the Tathagata.

2.3 Mahānāma, a noble disciple whose mind is straight gains inspired knowledge in the goal [the meaning of Dharma], gains inspired knowledge in the truth [the Dharma],

gains gladness connected with the Dharma;
when he is gladdened, zest is born;
when the mind is zestful, the body is tranquil;
the tranquil body feels happy;
when one is happy the mind becomes concentrated.

2.4 This, Mahānāma, is called a noble disciple (ariya,sāvaka).

he dwells impartial (sama-patta) amongst partial [vicious] people;
he dwells unafflicted (avyāpajjha) amongst afflicted people;
as one who has entered upon the Dharma stream, he cultivates the recollection of the Buddha.

3 (2) FAITH IN THE DHARMA.

Furthermore, Mahānāma, the noble disciple recollects the Dharma, thus:

‘Well-taught is the True Teaching [the Dharma] of the Blessed One, visible here and now, immediate, inviting one to come and see, accessible, to be personally known by the wise.’

3.2 Mahānāma, when the noble disciple recollects the Dharma thus, his mind is not obsessed by lust, not obsessed by hate, not obsessed by delusion. At that time, his mind is straight, inspired by the Dharma.

3.3 Mahānāma, a noble disciple whose mind is straight gains inspired knowledge in the goal [the meaning of Dharma], gains inspired knowledge in the truth [the Dharma],

gains gladness connected with the Dharma;
when he is gladdened, zest is born;
when the mind is zestful, the body is tranquil;
the tranquil body feels happy;
when one is happy the mind becomes concentrated.

3.4 This, Mahānāma, is called a noble disciple:

steers); also of other animals: asa, damma, sārathī, a horse trainer (A 2:112); It 80. In purisa, damma sārathī, fig (“the trainer of the human steer”) of unconverted persons, likened to a refractory bullocks; D 1:62 (wr–dhamma) = 2:93 = 3:5; M 2:38; A 2:112; Vv 17.13; cf VvA 86.

39 “His mind is straight” (uju,gata,citta), ie “his mind goes directly (ujukam eva) to the meditation on the recollection of the Buddha” (AA 3:337).

40 On this attha,veda passage, cf the nivarana,pahina passage at Sāmañña,phala S (D 2,76/1:73), SD 8.10n for other refs.

41 “Noble saint” refers to any of the 4 kinds of aryas, viz, the streamwinner (sot’āpanna), the once-returner (sāka-dāgāmi), the non-returner (anāgāmī) and the arhat. Here the streamwinner is meant. On the saints, See Kīṭāgiri S (M 70), SD 11.1(5).

42 “The Dharma stream,” dhamma,sota. Obviously here, the Buddha is referring either to streamwinning or one on the way to become one. For details, see SD 3.2 (A 5.202) n & SD 3.14 (A 6.44) n.

he dwells unafflicted amongst afflicted people; [286]
as one who has entered upon the Dharma stream, he cultivates the recollection of the Dharma.

4 (3) FAITH IN THE SANGHA. Furthermore, Mahānāma, the noble disciple recollects the Sangha, thus:

‘The Blessed One’s community of disciples keeps to the good way;
the Blessed One’s community of disciples keeps to the straight way;
the Blessed One’s community of disciples keeps to the true way;
the Blessed One’s community of disciples keeps to the proper way.

These are the 4 pairs of persons, the 8 individuals.

4.2 Mahānāma, when the noble disciple recollects the Sangha thus, his mind is not obsessed by lust, not obsessed by hate, not obsessed by delusion. At that time, his mind is straight, inspired by the Sangha.

4.3 Mahānāma, a noble disciple whose mind is straight gains inspired knowledge in the goal [the meaning of Dharma], gains inspired knowledge in the truth [the Dharma], gains gladness connected with the Dharma; when he is gladdened, zest is born; when the mind is zestful, the body is tranquil; the tranquil body feels happy; when one is happy the mind becomes concentrated.

4.4 This, Mahānāma, is called a noble disciple:
he dwells impartial amongst partial [vicious] people;
he dwells unafflicted amongst afflicted people;
as one who has entered upon the Dharma stream, he cultivates the recollection of the Sangha.

Other practices of the streamwinner

5 (4) RECOLLECTION OF MORAL VIRTUE. Furthermore, Mahānāma, the noble disciple recollects his own moral virtue, as being unbroken, untorn, unmixed, spotless, liberating, praised by the wise, untarnished, giving rise to concentration.

44 Commented on at Vism 7.89-100/218-221. See Saṅghānussati, SD 15.10a.
45 On who “These four pairs of persons...” are, see Aṭṭha,puggala S 1 (A 4:292 = D 33.3.1(3)/3:255), SD 15.10a-(1). See also SD 15.5(3): Saṅghānusmṛti & Saṅghānussati.
46 Āhuneyyo. That is, worthy of receiving sacrifices or offerings. The Skt cognate āhavanīya refers to that which was offered as an oblation as in āhuneyy'aggī, one of the 3 brahminical sacrificial fires (the one in the east).
47 Dakkhiṇeyyo. Specifically refers to offerings made for the benefit of the departed by way of dedication of merits to them.
48 Commented on at Vism 7.101-106/221 f. See Silānussati, SD 15.11.
49 “Virtues dear to the noble ones” (ariya,kantāni sīlāni), found in the stock passage elsewhere (eg Pañca Vera,-bhaya S, S 12.41/2:69 = SD 3.3(4.2) & Cundi S, A 5.32/3:36), is omitted here; maybe rightly so, as the meditator is probably not yet an arya (saint of the path). These virtues are explained at Vism 7.101-106/221 f. SA says that the noble ones do not violate the five precepts; hence, these virtues are dear to them (SA 2:74).
50 “Unbroken,... giving rise to concentration,” akhaṇḍadehi acchiddehi asahalehi akammāsehi bhujissehi viññūpasatthāhehi aparāmatthāhehi samādhi,samvattanakehi. See prec n. Cf UA 268. For details, see Vism 1.143-161/51-58, 7.101-106/221 f.
5.2 Mahānāma, when the noble disciple recollects his own moral virtue thus, his mind is not obsessed by lust, not obsessed by hate, not obsessed by delusion. At that time, his mind is straight, inspired by moral virtue.

5.3 Mahānāma, a noble disciple whose mind is straight gains inspired knowledge in the goal [the meaning of Dharma], gains inspired knowledge in the truth [the Dharma],

gains gladness connected with the Dharma;
when he is gladdened, zest is born;
when the mind is zesty, the body is tranquil;
the tranquil body feels happy;
when one is happy the mind becomes concentrated. [287]

5.4 This, Mahānāma, is called a noble disciple:
he dwells impartial amongst partial [vicious] people;
he dwells unafflicted amongst afflicted [violent] people; as one who has entered upon the Dharma stream, he cultivates the recollection of moral virtue.

6 (5) RECOLLECTION OF CHARITY. Furthermore, Mahānāma, the noble disciple recollects his own charity, thus:

‘Truly it is a gain for me, a true gain for me, that amongst people obsessed by the stain of avarice,
I dwell at home with a heart free from the stain of avarice, devoted to charity,
on-open-hands,
delighting in giving,
devoted to alms-giving, delighting to have a share in giving.’

6.2 Mahānāma, when the noble disciple recollects charity thus, his mind is not obsessed by lust, not obsessed by hate, not obsessed by delusion. At that time, his mind is straight, inspired by charity.

6.3 Mahānāma, a noble disciple whose mind is straight gains inspired knowledge in the goal [the meaning of Dharma], gains inspired knowledge in the truth [the Dharma],

gains gladness connected with the Dharma;
when he is gladdened, zest is born;
when the mind is zesty, the body is tranquil;
the tranquil body feels happy;
when one is happy the mind becomes concentrated.

5.4 This, Mahānāma, is called a noble disciple:
he dwells impartial amongst partial [vicious] people;
he dwells unafflicted amongst afflicted people; as one who has entered upon the Dharma stream, he cultivates the recollection of charity.

7 (6) THE RECOLLECTION OF DEITIES. Furthermore, Mahānāma, the noble disciple cultivates the recollection of the deities.

7.2 Here, Mahānāma, the noble disciple recollects the deities, thus:

S (A 8.54.14/4:284 = SD 5.10), this serves as the def for “the accomplishment in charity” (cāga,sampadā).

54 Comy at Vism 7.115-118/225 f. See Devatānussati, SD 15.13.
‘There are the devas of the heaven of the Four Great Kings (cātum, mahā, rājīka); there are the devas of the heaven of Tāvatiṃsa [the heaven of the 33 devas]; there are the devas of the heaven of Yāma; there are the devas of the heaven of Tusiṭa [the contented]; there are the devas of the heaven of Nimmāna,raji [those who delight in creating]; there are the devas of the heaven of Para,nimmita,vasavatī [those who lord over the creation of others]; there are the devas of Brahma’s Hosts; (and) there are the devas beyond these.

7.3 THE FIVEFOLD NOBLE GROWTH.
(1) The faith that those devas are endowed with because of which, when they pass away from this world, they were reborn there, that kind of faith is found in me, too.
(2) The moral virtue that those devas are endowed with because of which, when they pass away from this world, they were reborn there, that kind of moral virtue is found in me, too.
(3) The learning that those devas are endowed with because of which, when they pass away from this world, they were reborn there, that kind of learning is found in me, too.
(4) The charity that those devas are endowed with because of which, when they pass away from this world, they were reborn there, that kind of charity is found in me, too.
(5) The wisdom that those devas are endowed with because of which, when they pass away from this world, they were reborn there, that kind of wisdom is found in me, too.’

7.4 Mahānāma, when the noble disciple recollects his own faith, and moral virtue, and learning, and charity, and wisdom, and those of the devas thus, his mind is not obsessed by lust, not obsessed by hate, not obsessed by delusion. At that time, his mind is straight, inspired by the devas.

7.5 Mahānāma, a noble disciple whose mind is straight gains inspired knowledge in the goal [the meaning of Dharma], gains inspired knowledge in the truth [the Dharma], gains gladness connected with the Dharma; when he is gladdened, when the mind is zestful, the tranquil body feels happy; when one is happy the mind becomes concentrated.

7.6 This, Mahānāma, is called a noble disciple: he dwells impartial amongst partial [vicious] people;

55 Māra the bad one is said to reside in this heaven, lording over a part of it (MA 1:33 f). The ruler of this realm here is called Vasa,vatī (D 1:219; A 4:243). Māra is also called Vasa,vatī (but distinct from his namesake) because he is “lord with great power over the 6 Sense Realms” (māro mahānubhāvo cha,kāmāvar’issaro vasavatī, MA 2:201). Māra is also called Pajā,patī, “the lord of creation,” because he lords over this “generation” (pajā) of living beings (M 1.9/1:2; MA ad loc).

he dwells unafflicted amongst afflicted people;
as one who has entered upon the Dharma stream, he cultivates the recollection of the deities.\footnote{In (Tad'ah)Uposatha S (A 3.70), here follows “the fivefold growth,” where the practitioner recollects that he, too, has the faith, moral virtue, learning, generosity and wisdom that the devas have, because of which they have won birth in the heavens (A 3.70(8b)/1:210), SD 4.18.}

7.7 Mahānāma, a noble disciple who has attained the fruit and understood the teaching continuously dwells in this way.
