Dīghāvu Sutta
The Discourse to Dīghāvu
[Streamwinning and the 6 things conducive to true knowledge]
(Sāriyuttika Nikāya 55.3/5:344-347)
Translated & annotated by Piya Tan ©2007

1 The 6 things conducive to true knowledge
1.1 DīGHĀVU. The Dīghāvu Sutta records how the Buddha counsels the dying Dīghāvu, a streamwinner, advising him not to worry about his father, the householder Jotika. The Buddha teaches him how to cultivate the four limbs of streamwinning, that is, aspiring towards faith in the Three Jewels and supreme moral virtue [§§6-7]. When Dīghāvu declares that he is accomplished in them, the Buddha goes on to teach him the six things conducive to true knowledge (cha vijjā, bhāgiyā dhammā)¹ [1.2]. Dīghāvu later passes away and arises spontaneously in the Suddhāvāsa as a non-returner.² The Suttas do not seem to say anything more about Dīghāvu.

1.2 THE SIX THINGS CONDUCITIVE TO TRUE KNOWLEDGE are listed in the following discourse:

Vijjā, bhāgiya Dhamma Sutta
The Discourse on the Things Conducive to True Knowledge (Aṅguttara Nikāya 6.35/3:334)

1 Bhikshus, there are these six things conducive to true knowledge [these six things that partake of knowledge]. What are the six?
(1) the perception of impermanence (anicca, saññā),³
(2) the perception of suffering in what is impermanent (anicce dukkha, saññā),
(3) the perception of not-self in what is suffering (dukkhe anatta, saññā),
(4) the perception of abandonment [letting go of defilements] (pahāna, saññā),
(5) the perception of fading away [dispassion] (virāga, saññā),
(6) the perception of cessation (of suffering) (nirodha, saññā).

These, bhikshus, are the six things conducive to true knowledge.

— evam —

These six things conducive to true knowledge are also listed as short separate suttas in the Bojjhaṅga Saṁyutta (S 46).⁴

The teaching of the Vijjā, bhāgiya Dhamma Sutta (A 6.35) elaborates on how the perception of impermanence (anicca, saññā) should be done, that is, contemplating the impermanence in all formations, perceiving suffering in impermanence, perceiving not-self in suffering, perceiving the abandoning of defilements, perceiving the fading away of lust, and perceiving the cessation of suffering. The Okkanti

¹ Or more literally, “the six things that partake of knowledge.”
³ Given below [§8] as “contemplating impermanence in all formations” (sabba, saññāruse aniccānupassī).
⁴ S 46.71-76/5:132 f, where they are part of 10 perceptions, viz, the perceptions of (1) foulness (asubha, saññā), (2) death (maraṇa, saññā), (3) repulsiveness of food (āhāre paṭikkūla, saññā), (4) non-delight (sabba, loke anabhirata, saññā), (5) impermanence (anicca, saññā), (6) suffering (dukkha, saññā), (7) not-self (anatta, saññā), (8) abandonment (pahāna, saññā), (9) dispassion (virāga, saññā), and (10) cessation (nirodha, saññā). The last 6 forms the things conducive to true knowledge (vijjā, bhāgiya dhamma). See S:B 1914 n119. A unique set of 10 perceptions (ending with the breath meditation) is found in Giri-m-ānanda S (A 10.60/5:108-112) = SD 19.16 Intro (3.4).
Saṁyutta (S 25) gives ten ways of practising “the perception of impermanence,” that is, in connection with the six sense-faculties, the six sense-objects, the six sense-consciousnesses, the six sense-contacts, the six feelings, the six perceptions, the six volitions, the six cravings and the six elements.\(^5\)

It should be noted that the first nine perceptions all have to do with aspects of our personal being, that is, the senses, sense-objects and various types of sense-experiences. Even the last set—that of the six elements—have to do with the nature or composition of our body, that is, we consist of earth, water, fire, wind and consciousness, which are all impermanent, shifting all the time.\(^6\) The point is that we should observe and contemplate on the impermanence that pervades our being and daily life.

1.3 THE 6 PERCEPTIONS. In the Dīghāvu Sutta, the perception of impermanence is stated as “contemplating impermanence in all formations” (sabba,saṅkhāresu aniccânupassī) [§8]. This first perception is simply called:

1. The perception of impermanence is explained in a practical manner in the Anicca,saññā Sutta (S 22.102), and is stated as efficacious for the uprooting all desire and “I am” conceit. It is also briefly explained in the Giri-m-ānanda Sutta (A 10.60).\(^7\)

2. The perception of suffering in what is impermanent (anicce dukkha,saññā) is said in the (Vitto-thāra) Satta Saññā Sutta (S 7.46) as being conducive to overcoming indolence and to exerting oneself.\(^8\) In place of this perception, the Giri-m-ānanda Sutta (A 10.60) seems to have the perception of danger (ādīnava,saññā), where we reflect on the death from illness and other agencies, and other physical disadvantages.\(^9\)

3. The perception of not-self in what is suffering (dukkhe anatta,saññā) is briefly stated in the Giri-m-ānanda Sutta (A 10.60).\(^10\) The (Vitto-thāra) Satta Saññā Sutta (S 7.46) says that this perception is of “great fruit and great benefit for immersing and culminating in nirvana” (amat'ogadhā amata,pariyosāna).\(^11\)

4. The perception of abandonment [letting go of defilements] (pahāna,saññā) is defined in the Giri-m-ānanda Sutta (A 10.60) as a reflection leading to the removal of defiled thoughts.\(^12\)

5. The perception of fading away [dispassion] (virāga,saññā) and

6. The perception of cessation (of suffering) (nirodha,saññā) are defined in the Giri-m-ānanda Sutta (A 10.60) as discursive contemplations on nirvana.\(^13\) Elsewhere, in later works, however, virāganupassanā (the contemplation of fading away) and nirodhānapassanā (the contemplation of cessation) are treated as advanced contemplations of insight.\(^14\)

2 Extreme counselling in the Suttas

While the term “bedside counseling” refers to spiritual admonition to the sick, “extreme counselling” specifically refers to the spiritual counseling and guidance for the seriously ill and the dying. Often the two types of counselling overlap, and in fact have little difference. We find brief accounts of extreme counselling in the following discourses:

\(^5\) For the sutta names, etc, see (Anicca) Cakkhu S (S 25.1/3:225) = SD 16.7. The perception of impermanence is briefly def in Giri-m-ānanda S (A 10.60.5/5:109) = SD 19.16.

\(^6\) On the 4 elements (dhātu), see Mahā Hatthi, padopama S (M 28/1:184-191) = SD 6.26 & Intro (3) & Rūpa = SD 17.2a.

The Discourse to Dīghāvu
(S 55.3/5:344-347)

1 At one time, the Blessed One was staying in the squirrels’ feeding ground in the Bamboo Grove near Rāja,gaha.

Dīghāvu is sick
2 Now at that time the layman Dīghāvu was sick, in pain, and seriously sick.
3 Then the householder Dīghāvu addressed his father, the householder Jotika, thus:
   “Come, gaha,pati, please approach the Blessed One, and, in my name, pay homage to him with your head at his feet, saying:
   ‘Bhante, the householder Dīghāvu is sick, in pain, and seriously sick. He pays homage to the Blessed One at his feet.’
   And says thus:
   ‘It is good, bhante, if the Blessed One, out of compassion, visits the householder Dīghāvu in his house.’”
4 “Yes, son (tāta),”23 the householder Jotika answered the layman Dīghāvu in assent, and approached the Blessed One. Having approached the Blessed One, he saluted him, and sat down at one side.

The Buddha visits Dīghāvu
5 Then early in the morning, the Blessed One, having dressed himself, taking robe and bowl, approached the householder Dīghāvu’s house. [345] Then, he sat on the prepared seat.
   Seated24 thus, the Blessed One addressed the householder Dīghāvu thus:
   “How are you, householder? I hope you are bearing up, and getting better. I hope that your painful feelings are abating, that their abating is evident, not their rising.”
   “I cannot bear it, bhante;26 I am not getting better; my painful feelings are not abating, but rising; their rising is evident, not their abating.”

The uninstructed worldling fears death

6  THE FOUR LIMBS OF STREAMWINNING. Therefore, Dīghāvu, you should here train yourself thus:

(1) ‘I will be accomplished in wise faith in the Buddha [the awakened one], thus:

such is the Blessed One: he is an arhat,
fully self-awakened,
accomplished in wisdom and conduct,
well-farer,
knower of worlds,
peerless guide of tamable people,
teacher of gods and humans,
awakened,
blessed.’

(2) I will be accomplished in wise faith in the Dharma [the true teaching], thus:

well-taught is the Blessed One’s Dharma,
visible here and now,
[immediate [having nothing to do with time],
inviting one to come and see,
accessible,
to be personally known by the wise.’

(3) I will be accomplished in wise faith in the Sangha [the community of saints of the path], thus:

the Blessed One’s community of disciples keeps to the good way [well-practised];
the Blessed One’s community of disciples keeps to the straight way;
the Blessed One’s community of disciples keeps to the true way;
the Blessed One’s community of disciples keeps to the proper way.

These are the four pairs of persons, the eight individuals: these Blessed One’s community of disciples is worthy of offerings,
worthy of hospitality,
worthy of gifts,
worthy of salutation with the lotus-palms,
an incomparable field of merit for the world.’

(4) I will be accomplished in the moral virtue, beloved of the noble ones, that are unbroken, untorn [consistent], unmixed [not altering the rules], spotless, liberating, praised by the wise, untarnished, giving rise to concentration.

Thus, Dīghāvu, you should train yourself.”

27 On who “These four pairs of persons…” are, see Aṭṭha.puggala S 1 (A 4:292 = D 33.3.1(3)/3:255). See also SD 15.5(3): Sanghānusmṛti & Sanghānasattī.
28 Āhuneyyo. That is, worthy of receiving sacrifices or offerings. The Skt cognate āhavanīya refers to that which was offered as an oblation as in āhuneyy’āggi, one of the 3 brahminical sacrificial fires (the one in the east).
29 Dakkhineyyo. Specifically refers to offerings made for the benefit of the departed by way of dedication of merits to them.
30 “Moral virtues unbroken,…giving rise to concentration,” sīlāni akhanṭāni acchiddāni asabalāni akammāsāni bhujissāni viṁśupasaṭṭhāni aparāmatthāni samādhi, samvattanakānā (D 2:80, 3:245; M 1:322, 2:251; S 5:408; A 3:134, 3:289, 290; Pm 1:44; Nett 56). These are said to be “virtues dear to the noble ones,” ariya,kaṇṭāni sīlāni (S 5:364, 382, 386, 396, 408; A 3:36). The virtues of the noble one are explained at Vism 221 f. SA says that the noble ones do not violate the five precepts; hence, these virtues are dear to them (SA 2:74). See UA 268.
Dīghāvu affirms his faith

7a “Bhante, regarding these four limbs of streamwinning that have been taught by the Blessed One, these dharmas exist in me, and I live committed to these dharmas. For, bhante,

(1) I am accomplished in wise faith in the Buddha, thus:
   ‘Such is the Blessed One:
   he is an arhat,
   fully self-awakened,
   accomplished in wisdom and conduct,
   well-farer,
   knower of worlds,
   peerless guide of tamable people,
   teacher of gods and humans,
   awakened,
   blessed.’

(2) I am accomplished in wise faith in the Dharma, thus:
   ‘Well-taught is the Blessed One’s Dharma,
   visible here and now,
   immediate [having nothing to do with time],
   inviting one to come and see,
   accessible,
   to be personally known by the wise.’

(3) I am accomplished in wise faith in the Sangha, thus:
   ‘The Blessed One’s community of disciples keeps to the good way;
   the Blessed One’s community of disciples keeps to the straight way;
   the Blessed One’s community of disciples keeps to the true way;
   the Blessed One’s community of disciples keeps to the proper way.
   These are the four pairs of persons, the eight individuals:
   this Blessed One’s community of disciples is worthy of offerings,
   worthy of hospitality,
   worthy of gifts,
   worthy of salutation with the lotus-palms,
   an incomparable field of merit for the world.’

(4) I am accomplished in the moral virtue, beloved of the noble ones, that are unbroken, untorn [consistent], unmixed [not altering the rules], spotless, liberating, praised by the wise, untarnished, giving rise to concentration.

7b “Therefore, Dīghāvu, having established yourself in these four limbs of the streamwinner, you should further cultivate the six things conducive to true knowledge (cha vijjā, bhāgiya dhamma).
8a THE SIX THINGS CONDUCIVE TO TRUE KNOWLEDGE. Here, Dīghăvũ, dwell
(1) contemplating impermanence in all formations (sabba, saṅkhāresu aniccānupassī);36
(2) perceiving suffering in what is impermanent (anicce dukkha, saṁññī);
(3) perceiving not-self in what is suffering (dukkhe anatta, saṁññī);
(4) perceiving abandonment [letting go of defilements] (pahāna, saṁññī);
(5) perceiving fading away [dispassion] (virāga, saṁññī);
(6) perceiving cessation (of suffering) (nirodha, saṁññī).

Thus, Dīghăvũ, you should train yourself.

8b “Bhante, regarding these six things conducive to true knowledge that have been taught by the Blessed One, these dhammas exist in me, and I live committed to these dhammas. For, bhante, I dwell
(1) contemplating impermanence in all formations;
(2) perceiving suffering in what is impermanent;
(3) perceiving not-self in what is suffering;
(4) perceiving abandonment [letting go of defilements];
(5) perceiving fading away [dispassion];
(6) perceiving cessation (of suffering).

9 But, bhante, it occurred to me thus:
‘After my passing, may this householder Jotika not suffer distress!’” [346]

“Dear38 Dīghăvũ, think not so. Come now, dear Dīghăvũ, the Blessed One speaks to you: pay close attention to it.”

10 Then the Blessed One, having admonished the layman Dīghăvũ in this manner,39 rose from his seat and departed.

11 Then the layman Dīghăvũ, not long after the Blessed One had left, passed away.

12 Then some monks approached the Blessed One, saluted him and then sat down at one side. Seated thus at one side, the monks said this to the Blessed One:
“Bhante, that layman Dīghăvũ, whom the Blessed One admonished with a brief admonition, has passed away. What is his destiny, what is his future state?40 “Bhikshus, the layman Dīghăvũ is wise. He practised the Dharma in accordance with the Dharma, and did not trouble me on account of the Dharma.

13 Bhikshus, with the utter destruction of the five lower fetters, Dīghăvũ has become one spontaneously born, due to attain nirvana therein without returning from that world.”41
