(Ānanda) Jarā Sutta

The (Ānanda) Discourse on Decay | S 48.41

Also Jara,dhamma Sutta The Discourse on the Truth of Decay

Theme: Even the Buddha's body decays physically

Translated &amp; annotated by Piya Tan ©2013

The Buddha's body

1 The (Ānanda) Jarā Sutta is about the Buddha in his old age. In the Sutta, Ānanda lovingly massages the Buddha's aged limbs and declares how his complexion, too, is "no longer pure or bright, his limbs are all flabby and wrinkled, and his body bent over, and change can be seen in his faculties—in his eyes, his ears, his nose, his tongue, his body" [§3.2].

2 The Sutta teaching is the Buddha's admonition to Ānanda that "youth is subject to decay, health is subject to illness, life is subject to death" [§5]. This is, in fact, the theme of the Mada Sutta (A 3.39), which should be studied with this Sutta.<sup>1</sup>

The (Ānanda) Discourse on Decay

S 48.41

1 Thus have I heard.

At one time, the Blessed One was staying in the mansion of Migāra's mother in the Eastern Park.

Ānanda notices the Buddha's body decaying

2 Now at that time, the Blessed One had emerged from his evening solitary retreat, and was warming his back in the warmth of the setting sun.<sup>2</sup>

3.1 Then the venerable Ānanda approached the Blessed One, saluted him, and while massaging<sup>3</sup> his limbs with his hands, said this to him:

3.2 "How amazing, bhante! How strange, bhante! How the Blessed One's complexion is now no longer pure or bright, his limbs are all flabby and wrinkled, and his body bent over, and change can be seen in his faculties—in his eyes, his ears, his nose, his tongue, his body."<sup>4</sup> [217]

The Buddha on his own body's decay

4 "Such it is, Ānanda, youth is subject to decay, health is subject to illness, life is subject to death.

<sup>3</sup> Anomajjanto, from anu + ava + majjati [from √MRI, wipe], anomajjati, "to rub along over, to stroke; to beat, pound" only in the phrase, gattāni pāniṇā ~, "to rub one's limbs with one's hands" (M 1:80, 81, 509; S 5:216). More commonly anumajjati, as anumajjato (M 1:246, 2:93, 212), anumajjanto (S 1:82; Miln 90), anumajjāmi (M 1:246, 2:93, 212), anumajjivā (A 4:86), anumajjeyyāsi (A 4:86). Here gattāni, "limbs" is pl of gatta, "body." Comy here says "the back" (SA 3:244).

<sup>4</sup> Acchariyam bhante, abbhutam bhante, na c'evam dāni bhante bhagavato tāva parisuddho chavi, vaṇṇo pariyo-dāto, sithilāni ca gattāni sabbāni valiya, jātāni, purato pabbhāro ca kāyo, dissati ca indriyānam aññathattam cak-khu'ndriyassa sot'indriyassa ghān'indriyassa jivh'indriyassa kāy'indriyassāti. The exclamation abbhuta (Skt ad-bhuta), from √BHŪ, "to be," lit "not to be, not real, against reality."

This complexion is indeed no longer pure or bright, the limbs are all flabby and wrinkled, and the body bent over, and change can be seen in the faculties—in the eyes, the ears, the nose, the tongue, the body.”

5 The Blessed One said this. Having said this, the Well-gone [sugata], the Teacher, further said this:

The verses on impermanence

6 *Dhī taṃ jammi jare atthu, dubbaṇṇa,karaṇī jare
tāva mano,ramaṃ bimbam
jarāya abhimadditaṃ*

Shame on you, wretched decay!
Decay, you maker of ugliness!
This image delightful to you is crushed by decay.

7 *yo 'pi vassa,sataṃ jīve
sōpi maccu,parāyaṇo<sup>5</sup> na kiñci parivajjeti
sabbam evābhimaddatīti*

Though one should live a hundred years,
one still comes to the death's shore:
no one is spared at all,
it surely tramples all!
