2

Anatta Lakkhaṇa Sutta
The Discourse on the Nonself Characteristic | S 22.59 ≈ Mv 1.6.38-47 (V 1:13 f)
Pañca Sutta The Discourse on the Five
Theme: The 3 characteristics, the 5 aggregates, and nonself
Translated by Piya Tan ©2010

1 Sutta highlights

1.1 Sutta sequence

This is said to be the second discourse delivered by the Buddha to the 5 monks (the Buddha’s first disciples) who were still learners (sekha), that is, any of the 7 kinds of saints. At the end of the discourse, however, they became arhats. It should be noted that the first three suttas—the Dhamma, cakka Pavatana Sutta (S 56.11), the Anatta Lakkhaṇa Sutta (S 22.59) and the Āditta Pariyāya Sutta (S 35.28)—are not only closely related but flow coherently in that sequence.

The 1st discourse is a statement of the Buddha’s discovery of “suffering and its ending,” and what is merely mentioned—“in short, the 5 aggregates of clinging are suffering” [§5]—is elaborated in the 2nd discourse, the Anatta Lakkhaṇa Sutta (S 22.59), where the 5 aggregates are given in detail. In the 3rd discourse, the Āditta Pariyāya Sutta (S 35.28), the focus shifts to the “all,” that is, the 6 sense-bases, a teaching specifically given in the Sabba Sutta (S 35.23). 6

1.2 Sutta background

1.2.1 The Saṁyutta Commentary says that the Anatta Lakkhaṇa Sutta was delivered on the 5th day of the following fortnight after the teaching of the First Discourse (S 56.11), on the full-moon day of Āsāḷha (June-July). With the awakening of the 5 monks, the noble sangha is established and the Dispensation begins: Buddhism is born. [1.3.1.3]

1.2.2 The Sutta is also called the Pañca Sutta (the discourse on the five) for a couple of reasons: it teaches about the 5 aggregates, and secondly, the audience comprises the group of 5 monks (pañca, vaggiya). The main teachings of the Anatta Lakkhaṇa Sutta (S 22.59) and of the Assaji Sutta (S 22.88) are practically identical, except that in the former the syntax is in the plural (to the 5 monks), while in the latter it is singular (to Assaji). Furthermore, the Sutta was given on the 5th day of the waning fortnight. Hence, it well deserves the title Pañca Sutta; in fact, it celebrates a triple 5.

---

1 That is, streamwinner-to-be, streamwinner-become, once-returner-to-be, once-returner-become, non-returner-to-be, non-returner-become, and arhat-to-be. See Attha Puggala S 2 (A 8.60), SD 15.10a(2).
2 V 1:14; S 3:66; cf M 3:19.
3 See SD 1.1.
4 Pañc upadāna-k, khandha, viz, form, feeling, perception, formations and consciousness (S 3:47 Vbh 1).
5 See SD 1.3.
6 See SD 7.1.
7 For the significance of this in terms of the origins of Anatta Lakkhaṇa S (S 22.59), see Assaji S (S 22.88) @ SD 42.8 (2.3).

http://dharmafarer.org
1.3 Sutta significance

1.3.1 The first 5 monks

1.3.1.1 The Vinaya records the first awakening—the attainment of streamwinning—of each of the 5 monks (Konḍañña, Vappa, Bhaddiya, Mahānāma, and Assaji). Konḍañña is the first to attain streamwinning, and upon his request is admitted by the Buddha by the “Come, bhikshu” (ehi, bhikkhu) formula. Then, Vappa and Bhaddiya become streamwinners, while the other 3 monks go on almsround. Finally, it is Mahānāma and Assaji who become streamwinners, while the other two monks go on almsround. They are all admitted as renunciants with the same “Come, bhikshu” formula.

1.3.1.2 The Commentaries give us more details. It is well known that at the end of the exposition of the Dhamma, cakkavattana Sutta (S 56.11), Koṇḍañña awakens as a streamwinner. Then, the Buddha and the 5 monks enter into the rains-retreat that very day itself, a day widely known as Āsāḷha Pūjā.

1.3.1.3 The Commentaries, however, say that the remaining 4 monks, each attains streamwinning on a successive day after that: Vappa, on the following day, on the 1st day of the waning fortnight; Bhaddiya, on the 2nd day; Mahānāma, on the 3rd day, and Assaji, on the 4th day (AA 1:147). All the 5 attained arhathood at the end of the teaching of the Anatta Lakkhaṇa Sutta (S 22.59), on the 5th day of the waning fortnight (J 1:82).

1.3.2 The oldest monk

The Anatta Lakkhaṇa Sutta closes with the 5 monks—Konḍañña, Vappa, Bhaddiya, Mahānāma and Assaji—attaining arhathood [§11]. While it is true that Konḍañña is the first of the monks to attain streamwinning, all the 5 monks attain arhathood, the highest liberation, at the same time, that is, at the end of the exposition of the Anatta Lakkhaṇa Sutta.

Technically speaking, then, we cannot say that Konḍañña is the “foremost” (agga) of those monks who have seniority (rattāni), that is, those who have lived the most days (literally, “nights,” rattā). If we speak of the noble sangha (ariya, saṅgha), the first arhats (after the Buddha) would be the group of 5 monks, who are of equal seniority, since they awaken as arhats at the same time.

Hence, it is more likely that rattāni here does not mean “seniority” in terms of ecclesiastical rank or number of rains that the monk has rightly observed. Rather it simply means “seniority” in the literal sense, that is, the oldest of the monks, which Konḍañña indeed is. This interpretation also makes sense when we note that Mahā Pajāpati Gotamī is declared as the foremost of the nuns in terms of...

---

8 Mv 1.6.29 (V 1:11,32) & Mv 1.6.32 (V 1:12); also in Dhanma, cakkavaṭṭana S (S 56.11,20), SD 1.1.
9 Mv 1.6.32 (V 1:12,28); also in Dhanma, cakkavaṭṭana S (S 56.11,20), SD 1.1.
10 Mv 1.6.33-34 (V 1:12,28-13,2).
11 Mv 1.6.35-37 (V 1:13,6-17).
12 On Āsāḷha Pūjā, see SD 1.1 (1.2).
13 In the forenoon, J 1:92.
14 See SD 1.1 (2.3.4.1).
15 S 22.59/3:68 (SD 1.2); V 1:13 f.
16 On the admission of the 5 monks as renunciants, see SD 45.16 (1.1).
17 On Konḍañña, see Nalaka, pāṇa S (M 68) @ SD 37.4 (1.2.2).
18 For further details on the 5 monks, see SD 1.1 (1).

For Conventions and Bibliography, see http://www.themindingcentre.org/dharmafarers/sutta-discovery/guides seniority (A 1:25,18), that is, she is literally, the oldest of the nuns, and one who has awakened as an arhat.

2 Why there is no soul

2.1 The Anatta Lakkhaṇa Sutta gives two arguments against the notion of an abiding self. The first [§3-11] is that we are merely the 5 aggregates, and none of these aggregates can come under our control (avasa, vattitā). If anything is to be regarded as our self, we should be able to willfully control it, but this is not the case. We only have the delusion that we are in control, or desire to be in control, but in reality, we are blindly led on by our latent tendencies.

2.2 The second argument against the self-notion [§12-16] is in connection with the 3 characteristics: impermanence, unsatisfactoriness and nonself. Nonself is demonstrated on the basis of the other two characteristics, impermanence and suffering. A fuller analysis of this nonself doctrine is given in the Cūla Saccaka Sutta (M 35,11-21).

According to Buddhaghosa (MA 2:113 f), the Buddha proves the fact of nonself in 3 ways:

(1) by showing that something is not eternal (anicca);
(2) by showing that it is unsatisfactory (dukkha);
(3) by showing both.

2.3 In the Anatta Lakkhaṇa Sutta, the Buddha shows that the 5 aggregates of existence (pañca-k, khandha)—form, feeling, perception, mental formations, and consciousness—are dukkha. In the (Anicca) Siha Sutta (S 22.78), he speaks of the aggregates as being impermanent. In the Cha, chakka Sutta (M 148) he shows that the 6 senses (eye, etc), are anattā (nonself). In the Arahantā Sutta 1 (S 22.76), he shows that the 5 aggregates are both and anatta (nonself):

Bhikshus, visual form is impermanent: whatever is impermanent is unsatisfactory; whatever is unsatisfactory is nonself. Whatever is nonself is not mine, I am not that, that is not my self.
(S 22.76/3:82 f; see Dh 277-79 = Tha 676-78, Pm 2:106 for simplified versions)

2.4 The Anatta Lakkhaṇa Sutta comprises these 3 cycles:

(1) the 5-aggregate nonself pericope: the nonself nature of the 5 aggregates; [§§3-11]
(2) the aggregate-characteristic pericope: the 3 characteristics of the 5 aggregates; [§§12-16]
(3) the nonself totality pericope: nonself as the underlying principle of all states. [§§17-21]

It then closes with the “revulsion cycle” [§22.1]; the “liberation cycle” (the arhat’s review knowledge) [§22.2]; and finally the Conclusion [§23], which mentions arhathood.

---

19 There is no clear internal evidence to support the tradition that Gotamī is the first nun, although her admission has the most interesting history, considering her social status: see SD 45.16 (1.2).
20 For a discussion on the will (incl free will), see Atta,kārī S (A 6.38), SD 10.10 Intro.
21 S 22.78,7/3:85 (SD 42.10).
22 M 148,10-15/3:282-284 (SD 26.6).
Anatta Lakkhaṇa Sutta
The Discourse on the Nonself Characteristic

S 22.59 ≈ Mv 1.6.38-47

[Thus have I heard.]

At one time the Blessed One was staying in the Deer Park at Isipatana near Benares.

Then, the Blessed One addressed the group of 5 monks:

“Bhikshus!”

“Bhante!” the monks replied. The Blessed One said:

The 5-aggregate nonself pericope

1. “Bhikshus, form is nonself.

2. Bhikshus, feeling is nonself.

3. Bhikshus, perception is nonself.

4. Bhikshus, formations are nonself.

The usage of “non-self” as an adj here may sound a bit awkward to some. It helps as we read it to recall its def as “bereft or any permanent entity.”

This is the first argument against the self-view, that is, the nature of the 5 aggregates are not subject to our control (avasa, vatti), but they are all subject to illness [affliction], and as such cannot be our self. See Steve Collins, Selfless Persons, 1982:97-103 for the 3 arguments against the self or soul.

For Conventions and Bibliography, see http://www.themindingcentre.org/dharmafarer/sutta-discovery/guides
‘Let my formations be such. Let my formations not be such.’
10 But, bhikshus, because formations are nonself, formations lead to illness, and it is not possible to say of formations: ‘Let my formations be such. Let my formations not be such.’

11 (5) Bhikshus, consciousness is nonself. [Mv 1.6.41]
For, bhikshus, if consciousness were self, this consciousness would not bring about illness, and it would be possible to tell the consciousness: ‘Let my consciousness be such. Let my consciousness not be such.’

13 (2) “Is feeling permanent or impermanent?”
“Impermanent, bhante.”
Whatever is impermanent, is it unsatisfactory [suffering] or satisfactory [pleasurable]? [Mv 1.6.42]

The aggregate-characteristic pericope

12 Now, what do you think, bhikshus, (1) is form permanent or impermanent?”
“Impermanent, bhante.”
Whatever is impermanent, is it unsatisfactory or satisfactory?
“Unsatisfactory, bhante.”
Whatever is impermanent, unsatisfactory and subject to change, is it fit to be regarded thus: ‘This is mine, this I am, this is my self.’?
“No, bhante.” [Mv 1.6.42]

32 See Viññāna, SD 17.8a.
33 A shorter version of this and foll sections are given as Arahatā S 1 (S 22.76/3:82 @ SD 28.7) = Arahatā S 2 (S 22.77/3:84, without verse).
34 Dukkhaṁ vā sukhaṁ vā. Here, the alternative tr, “painful,” reminds us that whatever brings us pain or discomfort (bodily or mentally) is not liked by us. When the pain is gone, we feel some pleasure. However, even the pleasurable is impermanent, and when it is gone, we feel pain. Hence, both the painful and the pleasant are “suffering” (dukkha). It is useful to understand this difference between pain and suffering. Simply put, pain is natural (we have a physical but conscious body, so we feel pain, whether tolerable or intolerable, which is a sign of irritability or sensitivity of our experiences); suffering is optional (we can train our minds not to be attached to what is pleasant or to reject what is unpleasant, and to regard even the neutral as being impermanent, changing, becoming otherwise.)

35 Etam mama, eso ’ham asmi, eso me attāti. These are “the 3 graspings” (ti, vidha gāha), ie, of view (diṭṭhi), of craving (tanhā), of conceit (māna) (MA 2:111, 225). The notion “This is mine” arises through craving; the notion “This I am” arises through conceit; the notion “This is my self” arises through views. These 3 considerations represent respectively the 3 kinds of mental proliferation (papañca) of self-view (sakkāya diṭṭhi), of craving (tanhā), and of conceit (māna) (Nm 280; Vbh 393; Nett 37 f). The opposite formula, n’etam mama, n’esos ’ham asmi, na mēso attā ti, is applied below to the 5 aggregates [§617-21]. See §17 n. See Peter Harvey, The Selfless Mind, 1995:32 f. For detailed studies, see 1: The nature of identity, SD 19.1; Me: The nature of conceit, SD 19.2a; Mine: The nature of craving, SD 19.3.
14 (3) “Is perception permanent or impermanent?”
“Impermanent, bhante.”
“Whatever is impermanent, is it unsatisfactory or satisfactory?”
“Unsatisfactory, bhante.”
“Whatever is impermanent, unsatisfactory and subject to change, is it fit to be regarded thus:
‘This is mine, this I am, this is my self?’
“No, bhante.”

15 (4) “Are formations permanent or impermanent?”
“Impermanent, bhante.”
“Whatever is impermanent, is it unsatisfactory or satisfactory?”
“Unsatisfactory, bhante.”
“Whatever is impermanent, unsatisfactory and subject to change, is it fit to be regarded thus:
‘This is mine, this I am, this is my self?’
“No, bhante.”

16 (5) “Is consciousness permanent or impermanent?”
“Impermanent, bhante.”
“Whatever is impermanent, is it unsatisfactory or satisfactory?” [68]
“Unsatisfactory, bhante.”
“Whatever is impermanent, unsatisfactory and subject to change, is it fit to be regarded thus:
‘This is mine, this I am, this is my self?’
“No, bhante.” [Mv 1.6.43]

The nonself totality pericope

17 “Therefore, bhikshus,
(1) any kind of form whatsoever,
whether past, future or present,
internal or external,
gross or subtle,
inferior or superior,
far or near37—

36 This whole section is mutatis mutandis at Cūḷa Saccaka S (M 35,24b/1:234 f) = SD 26.5. These are the characteristics of a learner (sekha). The arhat, on the other hand, not only has the right view of non-self, but has also abandoned all clinging, as the Buddha explains in the fol 17.22. The “specific non-self formula” is the line, “This is not mine, this I am not, this is not my self.” The combined “aggregate characteristics pericope” [§12-16] and the “non-self totality pericope” [§17-21] is called the “general non-self pericope.”

37 Atītānagata, paccuppannam ajihattaṁ va bahiddhā va olārikāṁ va sukhumāṁ va hīnaṁ va paṇītaṁ va yam dūre santike vā. See (Dve) Khandha S (S 22.48/3:47) + SD 17.1a (3.2). This totality pericope or formula is expl in detail in Vibhaṅga and briefly in Visuddhimagga: “internal” (ajihatta) = physical sense-organs; “external” (bahiddhā) = physical sense-objects; “gross”(olārika) = that which impinges (physical internal and external senses, with touch = earth, wind, fire); “subtle”(sukhumā) = that which does not impinge (mind, mind-objects, mind-consciousness, and water); “inferior” (hīna) = unpleasant and undesirable sense-experiences [sense-world existence]; “superior” (paṇīta) = pleasant and desirable sense-experiences [form & formless existences]; “far” (dūre) = subtle objects (“difficult to penetrate”); “near” (santike) = gross objects (“easy to penetrate”) (Vbh 1-13; Vism 14.73/450 f; Abhs 6.7). “Whether or not the details of the Vibhaṅga exposition are accepted as valid for the nikāyas, it seems clear that this all forms should be seen as they really are with right wisdom, thus:
‘This is not mine, this I am not, this is not my self.’\textsuperscript{38} [Mv 1.6.44]

18 (2) Any kind of feeling whatsoever—whether past, future or present, internal or external, gross or subtle, inferior or superior, far or near—all feelings should be seen as they really are with right wisdom, thus:
‘This is not mine, this I am not, this is not my self.’

19 (3) Any kind of perception whatsoever—whether past, future or present, internal or external, gross or subtle, inferior or superior, far or near—all perceptions should be seen as they really are with right wisdom, thus:
‘This is not mine, this I am not, this is not my self.’

20 (4) Any kind of formations whatsoever—whether past, future or present, internal or external, gross or subtle, inferior or superior, far or near—all formations should be seen as they really are with right wisdom, thus:
‘This is not mine, this I am not, this is not my self.’

21 (5) Any kind of consciousness whatsoever—whether past, future or present, internal or external, gross or subtle, inferior or superior, far or near—all consciousness should be seen as they really are with right wisdom, thus:
‘This is not mine, this I am not, this is not my self.’ [Mv 1.6.45]

Revulsion

22 Seeing thus, bhikshus, the tutored noble disciple is revulsed [disenchanted]\textsuperscript{39} with form, is revulsed with feeling, is revulsed with perception, is revulsed with formations, is revulsed with consciousness, evam passaṁ bhikkhave sutavā ariya,sāvako rūpasim pi nibbindati vedamāya pi nibbindati saññāya pi nibbindati sañkhāresu pi nibbindati viññānasim pi nibbindati

Liberation

22.2 THE ARHAT’S REVIEW KNOWLEDGE
Through revulsion, he becomes dispassionate. nibbindati virajjati
Through dispassion, he is free. virāgā vimuccati
Freed, there arises the knowledge: ‘Free!’\textsuperscript{40} vimuttasmiṁ vimuttam iti ūnām hoti formula is intended to indicate how each khandha is to be seen as a class of states, manifold in nature and displaying a considerable variety and also a certain hierarchy” (Gethin 1986: 41).

\textsuperscript{38} N’etaṁ mama, n’eso ’ham asmi, na mēso atta ti. A brief version, “There can be no considering that (element) as ‘I’ or ‘mine’ or ‘I am’” (ahan ti vā mamant vā asmi vā vā) is found in Mahā Hatthi, padopama S (M 28/1:184-191 §§6b-7, 11b-12, 16b-17, 21.2-22). This is opp of “the 3 grasping” (ti,vidha gāha) formula: etam mama, eso ’ham asmi, eso me atta ti [§§12-16]. In Anatta Lakkhana S (S 22.59,12-16/3:68), this formula is applied to the 5 aggregates & in Pāliyāya S (S 22.81/3:94-99), SD 6.1, to the 4 primary elements. See §12 n. See also (Dhātu) Rāhula S (A 4.177/2:164 f). See Pāliyāya S, SD 6.1 (5). See Peter Harvey, The Selfless Mind, 1995a:32 f.
\textsuperscript{39} On revulsion, see Nibbidā, SD 20.1.
He understands:

‘Destroyed is birth.

The holy life has been lived.

What needs to be done has been done.

There is no more of this state of being.’” [Mv 1.646]

Conclusion: Arhathood of the 5 monks

23 The Blessed One said this. Satisfied, the group of 5 monks rejoiced in the Blessed One’s word.

24 And while this discourse was being given, the minds of the group of 5 monks were, through non-clinging, freed from the influxes.

[25 At that time, there were 6 arhats in the world.][Mv 1.6.47] [Mv 1.6.47]

— sattamān —

Bibliography

[See SD 1 Main Bibliography]]

Wynne, Alexander

120803
130306
141016
151006
161109
171107
180630
200722

---

40 Vimuttismīṃ vimuttam iti ūnāmar hoti, or “When free, there is the knowledge, it (the mind) is free.” Note that the self is not addressed here. On “Free!” see SD 50.1 (3.1.2.2).

41 Comy says that the elder Kondañña attained streamwinning on the Āsāḷha full-moon day; on the 1st day (after the full moon) Bhaddiya; on the 2nd day Vappa; on the 3rd day Mahānāma, and on the 5th day Assaji. All 5 attained arhathood at the end of the teaching of Anatta Lakkhana Sutta (Iti thero āsāḷha, puṇṇamāyaṃ satāpati, phale patiṭṭhito, pāṭipado, divase bhaddiya-t, thero, dutiya, pakkha, divase vappa-t, thero, tatiya, pakkha, divase mahānāma-t, thero, pakkhassa catutthiyam assaji-t, thero satāpati, phale patiṭṭhito. Paṭicamiyā pana pakkhassa anatta, lakkhaṇa, suttānto, desanā, pariyōsāne sabbe pi arahatte patiṭṭhitā, AA 1:147).

42 On the nature of listening as the basis for arhathood, see Assaji S [SD 22.88] @ SD 42.8 (2.3.3).

43 “Influxes,” āsava. The term comes from ā-savati “flows towards” (ie either “into” or “out” towards the observer). It has been variously tr as taints (“deadly taints,” RD), corruptions, intoxicants, biases, depravity, misery, evil (influence), or simply left untr. The Abhidhamma lists 4 āsava: the influx of (1) sense-desire (kām’ āsava), (2) desire for eternal existence (bhav’āsava), (3) views (diṭṭha’āsava), (4) ignorance (avijjāsava) (D 16.2.4, Pm 1.442, 561, Dhs §§1096-1100, Vbh §937). These 4 are also known as “floods” (āgha) and “yokes” (yoga). The list of 3 influxes (omitting the influx of views) is prob older and is found more frequently in the Suttas: Saṅgīti S (D 33,1.10(20)/3:216); Saṅmā,diṭṭhi S (M 9.70/1:55), SD 11.14; Āsava S (S 38.8/4:256); Te (viṭṭa) Jānuṣṇuṣi S (A 3.59.4/1:167); Nibbedhika Pariyāya S (A 6.63/3:410), SD 6.11. The destruction of these influxes is equivalent to arhathood. See BDx under āsava.

44 Tena kho pana samayena cha loke arahanto honti. This parenthesis is only in Mv 1.6.47 (V 1:14,36).

For Conventions and Bibliography, see http://www.themindingcentre.org/dharmafarer/sutta-discovery/guides