(Anuruddhā) Upakkilesa Sutta
The Discourse on Mental Impurities (to Anuruddha and Two Others) | M 128
Theme: Spiritual friendship and mental development
Translated by Piya Tan ©2003

1 The Kosambī incident

1.1 The (Anuruddhā)1 Upakkilesa Sutta is a remarkable discourse on the Buddha’s humanity [§§2-10] and the spiritual friendship amongst the saints [§§11-14]. It is also an important document on the Bodhisattva’s spiritual struggle before gaining awakening [§§15-30]. At the end of the sutta [§§31-32], it is clearly evident that Anuruddha attains the dhyana (jhāna), and in due course gains awakening.

The (Anuruddha) Upakkilesa Sutta is one of the texts recording the cycle of events and teachings connected with the Kosambī incident. These events occurred in the tenth year of the Buddha’s ministry, when he spent his rains residence in the Pārileyya forest (BA 3). The Pali texts of the Kosambī cycle are as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Pali Text</th>
<th>Page Numbers</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Mahāvagga 10</td>
<td>V 1:337-360</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cūḷa Gosiṅga Sutta</td>
<td>M 31/1:205-2112</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kosambiya Sutta</td>
<td>M 48/1:320-325</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Anuruddhā Upakkilesa Sutta</td>
<td>M 128/3:152-162</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pārileyya Sutta</td>
<td>S 22.81/3:94-99</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>cf. (Udāna) Nāga Sutta3</td>
<td>U 4.5/41 f</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

1.2 The most comprehensive records of the Kosambī incident are found in the Mahāvagga 10 of the Vinaya (V 1:337-360). The Mahāvagga text gives the fullest account of quarrel at Kosambī and how such disorder should be dealt with (that is, the manner of communal reconciliation and the need for harmony). The Sutta texts, on the other hand, while echoing only selected episodes from the Mahāvagga account, give expositions of the Dharma not found in the Mahāvagga account.

All these early accounts characteristically present the Buddha as a human teacher of great compassion and wisdom dealing with human weaknesses and replacing them with spiritual strength and liberation. The overall story is like this: a group of monks in Kosambī are divided by an ugly quarrel over a small incident; the Buddha tries to reconcile them thrice but fails; the Buddha then goes on solitary rains residence so that the monks could sort the problem out themselves; the Kosambī laity, disapproving of the shameless monks, withheld their support, and the monks are brought back to their senses.

1.3 The Buddha, en route to the Pārileyya forest for his retreat, meets Bhagu, Anuruddha, Nandiya and Kimbila (see below for each) and instructs them. During the retreat itself in the forest, the Buddha is looked after by an elephant and a monkey. At the end of the retreat, Ānanda and 500 monks meet the

---

1 On the use of Anuruddhā as pl, see §9n & also V 1:351.
2 Cūḷa Gosiṅga S (M 31) is listed here because it contains very similar passages as those of Upakkilesa S. From the events of these suttas, it is clear that Upakkilesa S recounts the struggle of Anuruddha, Nandiya and Kimbila for spiritual awakening, while in Cūḷa Gosiṅga S, they are arhats. See (5) here.
3 The opening story differs. Here, the Buddha reflecting in the discomfort (dukkha) of living in a crowded and busy monastery, leaves for for the ease (appossukka) of the Pārileyya forest. It also has the story of a bull elephant leaves its herd for solitude, and stays near the Buddha. The udāna is given in connection with this elephant’s quest for solitude.
Buddha in the Pārileyya forest (S 22.81). On his return to Kosambī, the monks have learned their lesson after a most uncomfortable rains residence, and are reconciled. The concordance table below shows how the various texts are related.

2 Sutta summary and significance

2.1 The (Anuruddhā) Upakkilesa Sutta opens with the quarrel amongst the monks of Kosambī [§§1-2]. The Buddha is informed of the strife and he admonishes the monks but fails to quell it [§§3-4]. The Buddha prepares to leave for a solitary retreat [§5] and utters some stanzas reflective of the occasion [§6]. He reaches Bālaka,loṇa,kāra,gāma and there admonishes Bhagu [§7].

2.2 Then, he goes on to Pācīna,varsā,ḍāya where he meets Anuruddha, Nandiya and Kimbila, and asks after their welfare [§§8-9]. They speak of their spiritual friendship [§§10-13]. Here, Anuruddha makes two remarkable statements: “It seems, bhante, that we are of different bodies but of one mind!” [§12.1] and another statement showing that they are observing the rule of “noble silence,” yet maintaining fellowship [14].

The discussion then goes on to the subject of meditation progress, on why Anuruddha is unable to maintain his perception of light and vision of form, and beyond [§15]. In answer, the Buddha speaks of how he himself has as a bodhisattva encountered various mental impurities [§§16-26], how he abandoned them [§27], then gained concentration [§§28-31] and finally liberation [§32].

2.3 The uniqueness of the Upakkilesa Sutta is its special treatment of “the divine eye” (dibba,cakkhu) in terms of meditation and the quest of spiritual awakening [§§15-31]. Sections 8-14 of the Upakkilesa Sutta are identical to those in the Vinaya account (V 1:350-352). The initial half of the Gosinīga Sutta (M 31) is almost identical to that of the Upakkilesa Sutta (M 128), except for the stanzas [§6].

2.4 It is, however, clear from the Upakkilesa Sutta, which records how the three monks together strive for liberation, that it is set before the Cūḷa Gosinīga Sutta, where all these three monks have attained arhathood. As such, the Cūḷa Gosinīga Sutta can be treated as a sequel to the Upakkilesa Sutta, together giving an account of how the three monks win final awakening. The identical earlier halves of the two suttas show their connection here.7

3 Upakkilesa

3.1 The title term upakkilesa is usually translated as “mental impurity” or “mental imperfection” (the word “defilement,” being reserved for kilesa). The Upakkilesa Sutta lists 11 mental impurities [§§16-26]:

1. spiritual doubt,          vicikicchā
2. inattention,             amanisākara
3. sloth-and-torpor,        thīna,middha
4. fear [terror],           chambhītatta

---

4 See Pārileyya S (S 22.87/3:94-99), SD 6.1.
5 M 31.1-10/1:205-207.
6 M 128.1-5, 7-14/3:152-157.
7 See also Cūḷa Gosinīga S (M 31) & SD 44.11 (2).
8 For another ancient list, that of the 18 mental impurities (upakkilesa), see Dhamma Dāyāda S (M 3,8-15/1:15 f) + SD 2.18 (3), & Vatṭhūpama S (M 7,3/1:36 f) + SD 28.12 (Table 3.2).

http://dharmafarer.org
(5) excitement,
(6) inertia or inaction,
(7) excessive effort,
(8) weak effort,
(9) longing,
(10) perception of diversity,
(11) excessive gazing at forms.

3.2 Apparently, these 11 mental impurities are an early listing of the 5 mental hindrances (pañca,-nīvaraṇā)⁹ and the 11 can be subsumed into the list of the 5 hindrances as follows:

(1) Sensual lust = (5) excitement,¹⁰ (9) longing, (11) excessive gazing at forms;
(2) Ill will = (6) inertia or inaction;
(3) Sloth-and-torpor = (2) inattention, (3) sloth-and-torpor;
(4) Restlessness & worry = (4) fear, (5) excitement, (7) excessive effort, (8) weak effort;
(5) Doubt = (1) doubt, (10) perception of diversity.

In the Commentaries, the term upakkilesa is usually glossed as “the 5 mental hindrances” (pañca,-nīvaraṇā) (eg DA 3:881; SA 3:201; AA 2:322).¹¹

4 Bhagu

4.1 Bhagu Thera comes from a Sakya family and renounces the world along with Anuruddha and Kimbila, dwelling together near the village of Bālaka,loka,kāra,gāma. One day, as he is leaving his cell to drive away his drowsiness, he falls on the terrace, and is then spurred on to gain liberation there and then. In due course, he wins arhatthood.

4.2 Later the Buddha visits and praises him on his solitude.¹² It is on this occasion that the Buddha, after his meal, discourses to Bhagu, continuing throughout the three watches of the night, that is, from dusk till dawn the next day.¹³ The next morning, Bhagu accompanies the Buddha on his almsround, and then turns back when the Buddha proceeds to Pācina,vaṃsça,ḍāya to see Anuruddha, Nandiya and Kimbila (SA 2:304).

4.3 Bhagu is mentioned in a number of places.¹⁴ He is probably the Jāti,pupphiya of the Apadāna (Ap 2:405 f).¹⁵

---

⁹ The 5 mental hindrances, see Listening beyond the ear, SD 3.2.5 & (Nīvaraṇa) Saṅgārava S (S 46.55/5:121-126), SD 3.12.
¹⁰ “Excitement” (ubbilla) probably overlaps both sensual lust, and restless and worry.
¹¹ For other meanings of upakkilesa, see BDct: upakkilesa.
¹³ SA 2:304. DPPN says that this discourse is referred to as Kilesiya S or Saṅkilesiya S (MA 2:153), and that it has not been traced. The Be text, however, reads this as Upakkilesa S (M:Be 2:60).
¹⁵ The DPPN however says that he is probably not the Bhagu staying with Jāti,pupphiya at the Kukkut’ārāma near Pāṭaliputta mentioned in Mahā Vagga 8 (V 1:300). See Thīna,middha, SD 32.6 (3.3.3).
5 Anuruddha

5.1 Anuruddha, one of the most eminent early disciples, was the son of the Sākya, Amit‘odana (a brother of Suddhôdana), and the brother of Mahâ,ñâma,16 and as such was the Buddha’s first cousin. When the male members of other Sākya families had joined the order, Mahânâma was sad that none from his own had gone forth. As such, he proposed that either he himself or his brother Anuruddha should renounce the world. Anuruddha was reluctant at first, for he had lived a very delicate and luxurious life, staying in a different dwelling for each season, surrounded by dancers and performers.

However, on hearing from Mahânâma of the endless rounds of household cares, Anuruddha later agreed to go forth. His mother, however, only consented after his cousin Bhaddiya went with him. They went with Ânanda, Bhagu, Kimbila, Deva, datta, and their barber, Upâli, to see the Blessed One at the Anuipiya mango grove,17 where they were ordained.18 Before the rains residence was over, Anuruddha had won the “divine eye” or clairvoyance (dibba, cakkhu), for which he was declared to be foremost amongst the monks (A 1:23).

5.2 The (Arahatta) Anuruddha Sutta (A 3.128) records Anuruddha’s visiting Sâriputta and how the latter points out Anuruddha’s conceit, arrogance and worry (and overcoming these defilements he finally becomes an arhat).19 In due course, Sâriputta gives Anuruddha his meditation object, the thoughts of a great man (mahâ, purisa, vitakka).20 Anuruddha then heads for Pâcina, vaṁsa, dâya in the Ceti country, to practise this meditation.

After he has mastered the first seven of them, the Buddha visits him (in a holographic form, Tha 901) and teaches him the eighth. Thereupon Anuruddha develops insight and realizes arhathood in the highest grade. The 8 thoughts of a great man are as follows:

1. This Dharma is for one with few wishes, not for one with many wishes.
2. This Dharma is for the contented, not for the discontented.
3. This Dharma is for one in solitude [for the reclusive], not for one who loves socializing.
4. This Dharma is for one who puts forth effort [the energetic], not for the indolent [the lazy].
5. This Dharma is for one established in mindfulness, not for one of confused mind.
6. This Dharma is for one in samadhi [mental concentration], not for one without samadhi.
7. This Dharma is for the wise, not for the unwise.
8. This Dharma is for one who rejoices in the non-proliferation of the mind, who delights in the non-proliferation of the mind, not for one who rejoices in mental proliferation, who delights in mental proliferation.

(A 8.30,1-3/4:228 f), SD 19.5

5.3 When the Buddha fails to reconcile the quarrelsome monks of Kosambi, he spends the rains residence all alone in the Pârîleyya forest. On the way there, he stops at Pâcina, vaṁsa, dâya where Anuruddha, Nandiya and Kimbila dwell.

16 On Mahânâma, see Cûla Dukkha-k, khandha S (M 14/1:91-95), see SD 4.7, & (Mahânâma) Roga S (S 55.54/-4:408-410), see SD 4.10.
18 V 2:180-183; AA 1:191; DhA 1:133, 4:127; Mvst 3:177-182.
19 A 3.128/1:281 f (SD 19.4).
The (Anuruddha) Upakkilesa Sutta (M 128), on the joy of fellowship and the perfection of the divine eye, is given to Anuruddha, Nandiya and Kimbila. At the end of the sutta, however, we are told that Anuruddha is pleased to have heard it, but no mention is made of the other two.\(^{21}\)

5.4 Again in the Nalakapāna Sutta (M 68),\(^{22}\) although there are other eminent monks present, it is to Anuruddha that the Buddha addresses his questions and it is Anuruddha who answers on their behalf. The Cūla Gosiṅga Sutta (M 31)\(^ {23}\) records the fellowship and spiritual awakening of the three friends Anuruddha, Nandiya and Kimbila. The Mahā Gosiṅga Sutta\(^ {24}\) also mentions Anuruddha along with other eminent monks discussing what kind of monk would illuminate the Gosiṅga forest, that is, what kind of monk is the ideal practitioner.

5.5 Anuruddha is present at the Buddha’s parinirvana at Kusinārā. He is aware of the Buddha’s final mental process and the exact moment of his passing. The verse he utters on that occasion is thoughtful and calm, in contrast, for example, to Ananda’s involved remarks (D 2:156 f). Anuruddha is foremost in consoling the monks there and admonishing them as to their future course of action.

It is Anuruddha again that the Mallas of Kusinārā consult regarding the Buddha’s last rites (D 2:160 f). Later, at the First Council, he is entrusted with the custody of the Anguttara Nikāya (DA 1:16).

5.6 Anuruddha appears in the Suttas as an affectionate and loyal comrade of his fellow monks, loving and respecting the Buddha, who returns his love. In the assembly of monks, he often stood near the Buddha (B 1.60).

Anuruddha’s verses are found in the Thera,gaṅthā (Tha 892-919). In one of his verses (Tha 904), he says that for the last fifty-five years of his life, he did not lie down on a bed (nesaṃjīka, that is, he used a sitting position for resting). For twenty-five years of that period, he was without torpor (Tha 904), which the Commentary explains as that he went without sleep (niddu pariccattā) during that period, and that during the last 30 years he slept only during the last watch of the night (ie from 2.00-4.00 am).\(^ {25}\)

5.7 The Vinaya records Anuruddha as the occasion for the proclamation of Pācittiya 6, which forbids a monk from lying down in a sleeping-place with a woman. While on his journey to Sāvatthī, Anuruddha stops for the night in a rest-house run by a beautiful woman. When the room became crowded, the woman, who took to liking him, offered a couch in separate quarters. \(^{26}\)

She confesses her liking for Anuruddha, who silently keeps his restraint. The woman, realizing that he is a morally virtuous monk, then apologizes. Anuruddha admonishes her here with Dharma, and she goes for refuge.

On meeting the Buddha, Anuruddha informs the Buddha of this incident, but the more modest monks criticized him. This led the Buddha to promulgate the rule.\(^ {27}\) It is likely that this event occurred soon after his ordination but before his attaining of arhathood.\(^ {27}\)

---

\(^{21}\) M 128/3:152-162 = SD 5.18.

\(^{22}\) M 68/1:462-468.

\(^{23}\) M 31/1:205-211.

\(^{24}\) M 32/1:212-219.

\(^{25}\) ThaA 3:70. Dīgha Comy however gives it as “50 years” (paññāsa vassāni), and lists other monks who are similarly said not to have used a bed are Sāriputta (30 years), Mahā Moggallāna (30 years), Mahā Kassapa (20 years), Bhaddiya (30 years), Soṇa (80 years). Raṭṭha,pāla (20 years), Ānanda (50 years), Rāhula (20 years), Bākula (80 years) and Nālaka throughout his monastic life, ie until his parinirvana (DA 3:76).

\(^{26}\) Pāc 6 @ V 4:17-20.

\(^{27}\) Cf I B Horner’s n at V:H 2:201 n2.
5.8 The Nikāyas mention an occasion when Jālinī, a Tāvatiṁsa deity, who had been his wife in a previous birth, seeing him aged and gray with meditation, offers him the joys of heaven, but he tells her he has no need of such things, having attained to freedom from rebirth.28

He passes away in the shade of a bamboo thicket at Veluva,gāma in the Vajjī country (Tha 919). He is 150 at the time of his death (DA 2:413).

6 Nandiya

6.1 Six friends (excluding Nandiya), with Upāli the barber, are mentioned in the Vinaya (V 2:182). Nandiya and Kimbila were Anuruddha’s friends and constant companions. The three are often mentioned together (such as in the Cūḷa Go,śiṅga Sutta, M 31/1:205),29 which although set in the Gosiṅga Wood, is similar to the Mahā,vaṇga passage (V 1:350-352). This Vinaya passage is a good example of spiritual friendship: there Anuruddha makes his famous statement to the Buddha,

What now, bhante, if I, having surrendered my own mind, were to live only according to the mind of these venerable ones? So I, bhante, having surrendered my own mind, am living only according to the mind of these venerable ones. Bhante, we have different bodies, but surely only one mind.

(V 1:351 = M 128,12.1/3:156)

6.2 Nandiya belonged to a Sākya family of Kapilavatthu, and was so named because his birth brought great joy (nanda) to the family. He renounced the world together with Anuruddha, Kimbila and other Sākyas, and they soon attained arhathood. After that he dwelt with Anuruddha and Kimbila in Pācīna,vaṃsa,dāya (V 1:350 f; M 3:155), where it is said that Māra appeared before him in a terrible form but he was able to rout him (ThaA 86). Later they moved on to Gosiṅga,sāla,vana (M 1:205). Nandiya’s verse is found in the Thera,gātha (Tha 25).

7 Kimbila

7.1 Kimbila (also Kimila or Kimmila) is a Sākya of Kapilavatthu who renounces the world with Bhaddiya, Ānanda, Bhagu, Kimbila, and Devadatta at Anupiya Mango Grove shortly after the Buddha’s visit.31 It is said that at Anupiya Mango Grove, the Buddha, in order to rouse a sense of urgency in Kimbila, projects the hologram of a beautiful woman in her prime who then rapidly passes through the phases of decay into old age.32 Kimbila keeps up his friendship with Anuruddha and Nandiya, and they dwell together as monks.

7.2 Once, at Veluvana, when the Buddha asks Kimbila about the benefits of the mindfulness of breathing, he is unable to answer even after being questioned thrice. Ānanda then intercedes and suggests that the Buddha should himself answer the question for the benefit of the monks (S 54.10/5:322 f). Kimbila’s verses are found in the Thera,gātha (Tha 118, 155 f).

---

28 S 1:200; Tha 908. On the deity Jālinī, see SA 1:293; ThaA 3:72.
29 M 31/1:205 @ SD 44.11.
30 For the full verse, see SD 47.1 (1.3.2), where also see further details. For others named Nandiya, see SD 47.1 (1.3).
31 V 2:182; DhA 1:112 f.
32 Khemā, Bimbisāra’s queen, sees the same psychic sequence on her first visit to the Buddha (DhA 24.5): see SD 27.5a (7.1.1).

http://dharmafarer.org
7.3 The Āṅguttara Nikāya contains three suttas—the Kimbila Suttas 1-3 (A 5.201, 6.40, 7.56)—recording conversations at Velu,vana or Nicelu,vana between Kimbila and the Buddha where Kimbila asks him the causes of the Dharma ending after the Buddha passes away.

According to the Commentaries, he is probably another Kimbila, said to be a seth’s son (setthi, putta) of Kimbilā who joined the Order and won the power of recalling past lives. He recalled how he had been a monk at the time when Kassapa Buddha’s dispensation was declining. Seeing how the Dharma was neglected by its followers, he made a staircase up a cliff and lived there as a recluse. It was this past-life memory that prompted him to ask the question (AA 3:323).

8 The eastern bamboo park

8.1 The (Anuruddha) Upakkilesa Sutta says that at that time, the three monks—Anuruddha, Nandiya and Kimbila—are staying in the eastern bamboo park (pācīna, vaṁsa, dāya) [§8]. It is a deer park; hence, it is also called the eastern bamboo deer park, pācīna, vaṁsa, migā, dāya), that is, a deer park in the eastern bamboo park.

Buddhaghosa, in his commentary on the Anuruddha Mahā, vitakka Sutta (A 8.30), says that the park was so called because it was located to the east of where the Buddha lived (namely, the Middle Country, majjhima padesa) and it was filled with bamboo that radiated a cloud-grey hue. (AA 2:765).

Dhamma, pāla, in his commentary on the Kimbila Thera, gāthā (Tha 155-156), says that pācīna, vaṁsa, dāya is the name given to a protected forest along with its periphery. Its name arose either due to its being a forest located to the east of the village that was surrounded by clumps of bamboo, or simply on account of its being a bamboo forest. (ThaA 2:31)

It is in the Ceti or Cetiya kingdom (ceti, rattha), one of the 16 great states, and located between Bālaka, lona kāra, gāma and the Pārileyyaka forest (DhA 1:47). The area is today in the Bundelkhand in central India (traversed by the Vindhya Range), a region between Uttar Pradesh and northern Madhya Pradesh (mostly in the latter).

8.2 The Buddha visits the forest a number of times. The Meghiya Sutta (A 9.3) records that once when the Buddha is staying there with Meghiya as his personal attendant, the latter decides to do a solitary meditation there in a mango grove outside the village of Jantu, gāma. According to the commentaries, “the eastern bamboo deer park” (pācīna, vaṁsa, migā, dāya) is located outside Jantu, gāma, which has an alternate name of Jattu, gāma.

---

33 A 5.201/3:247, 6.40/3:339 f, 7.56/4:84. See “The Dharma-ending Age” (essay) in SD 1.10(5b).
34 A setthi, sometimes tr as banker, guildmaster or treasurer, was a financial entrepreneur. The modern Indian word for it is “seth.”
35 A 8.30 = SD 19.5.
36 Majjhima padesa (a comy term): see SA 3:279; AA 2:37; see also DA 1:173; MA 3:409; DhA 3:248.
37 Pācīna, disāya...vaṁsa, dāye niil’obhāsehi velāhi sañchanne araññe (AA 4:117); also mentioned at M 3:153; A 4:228; Tha 155; DhA 1:56; ThaA 86.
38 Tattha pācīna, vaṁsa, dāyejantu, pācīna, vaṁsa, namake rakkhito, gopite saha, paricchede vane. Tañ hi vanam gānassa pācīna, disāyaṁ ṭhītattā vaṁsa, gumba, parikkhittattā ca “pācīna, vaṁsa, dāyejanto vutto, vaṁsa, van, bhāvena vati” (ThaA 2:31).
39 A 4:228 f; AA 4:122. On the Ceti people, see Anuruddha Mahā, vitakka S (A 8.30,2) n, SD 19.5.
40 On the 16 great states, see SD 4.18 App & SD 9 (16). For map, see SD 9 (16c) or http://www.aimwell.org/Photos/India/india.html.
43 Pācīna, vaṁsa, dāye jantu, gāmām (DA 2:419); pācīna, vaṁsa migā, dāye jantu, gāmām (AA 1:293).
8.3 During the Kosambī incident [§§2-4] in the 10th year of the Buddha’s ministry, the monks Anuruddha, Nandiya and Kimbila are residing in the eastern bamboo grove on their solitary retreat. The Buddha visits them on his way to the Pārileyyaka forest for his own solitary rains-retreat that year.

The Anuruddha Mahā, vitakka Sutta (A 8.30) records how Anuruddha, while residing in the eastern bamboo park, reflects on the nature of the true Dharma, famously recorded as “the 8 thoughts of the great man” (aṭṭha mahā, vitakka). Reflecting on these qualities of the true Dharma, he goes into dhyana and emerges as an arhat.\(^44\)

\(^{44}\) (A 8.30/4:228-235), SD 19.5: pācīna, vaṁsa, dāya is mentioned in §§1.2+32.1.
Table 8: The Kosambī Incident: A Concordance of Events Recorded in the Canon

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Vinaya (Mahāvagga 10)</th>
<th>Kosambīya Sutta</th>
<th>(Anuruddhā) Upakkilesa Sutta</th>
<th>Pārileyya Sutta</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>10.1.1-10 Origin of the Kosambī incident.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10.2.1 Dispute reported to the Buddha who admonishes.</td>
<td>[48.1-5] A certain monk informs the Buddha, who fails to quell them.</td>
<td>[128.2-4] Kosambī. A certain monk informs the Buddha who fails to quell them.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10.2.2 Dispute continues; the Buddha admonishes again but fails to quell them.</td>
<td></td>
<td>[128.5] The Buddha’s stanzas uttered while standing.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10.2.3-20 Story of Dīghīti and Dīghāvū.</td>
<td></td>
<td>[128.6] Leaves for solitary retreat.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10.3 The Buddha’s stanzas uttered while standing. Leaves for a solitary retreat.</td>
<td></td>
<td>[128.7] Bālaka,loṇa,kāra,gāma.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10.4.1 Bālaka,loṇa,kāra,gāma: Bhagu</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10.4.5 Dwelling together diligent.</td>
<td></td>
<td>[128.15-32] Solutions to mental impurities.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10.4.6 Pārileyya</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10.4.7 The elephant episode</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10.5.1-2 Kosambi laity boycott the disputing monks.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10.5.3-9 The Buddha admonishes the great disciples.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10.5.4-14 The disputing monks are rehabilitated.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10.6.1-3 The Buddha admonishes Upāli; closes with Upāli’s verses.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

[* A similar story of these 3 monks is found in Cūḷa Go,śīna S (M 31), which prob comes after Upakkilesa S. See (1).]

http://dharmafarer.org
(Anuruddhā) Upakkilesa Sutta
The Discourse on Mental Impurities
(to Anuruddha and others)
M 128

Thus have I heard.
At one time the Blessed One was staying in Ghosita’s Park near Kosambi.

Kosambi: the disputing monks

Now, at that time, the monks at Kosambi had taken to quarrelling and arguing, drowned in dispute, attacking each other with the weapons of words.45

Then a certain monk went to the Blessed One, [153] saluted him and stood at one side.

Standing thus at one side, he said this to the Blessed One:

"Bhante, the monks here at Kosambi have taken to quarrelling and arguing, drowned in dispute, attacking each other with the weapons of words. It would be good, bhante, if the Blessed One would go to those monks, out of compassion."

The Blessed One consented with his silence.

Then the Blessed One went to those monks and said this to them:

"Enough, bhikshus, let there be no quarrel, no arguing, no strife, no dispute!"

When this was said, a certain monk47 said this to the Blessed One:

"Let it be,48 bhante! Let the Blessed One, the Lord of the Dharma, dwell at ease devoted to the pleasant dwellings [abidings] here and now,49 bhante. We are the ones who will be responsible for this quarrel, arguing, strife and dispute."

For the second time, the Blessed One said this:

"Enough, bhikshus, let there be no quarrel, no arguing, no strife, no dispute!"

For the second time he answered in the same way.

For the third time, the Blessed One said this:

"Enough, bhikshus, let there be no quarrel, no arguing, no strife, no dispute!"

For the third time he answered in the same way.

45 The opening setting is identical to Kosambiya S (M 48,1-2/1:320). However, Kosambiya S (M 48,6) recounts the Buddha’s admonitions to the monks in greater detail giving the 6 principles of cordiality in full [12]. “Weapons of words,” mukha,satthi, lit “swords of the mouth.”

46 The Buddha’s admonition here includes the story of Dīghāti and Dīghāvu (Mv 10.2.3-10/V 1:342-349). See Intro: “The Kosambi Incident” concordance table.

47 In Vinaya, this monk is called “the speaker of what is not Dharma” (adhamma,vādi, V 1:341). See V:H 4:489 n1.

49 Diṭṭha,dhamma,sukha,vihara, or “pleasant abiding here and now” (sukha,vihāra): V 2:188×2; M 4,34.2/1:23 (SD 44.3); M 67,12.2/459×2 (SD 347.7) (qv), M 128,4/3:153×3 (SD 5.18); S 16.5/2:203 (SD 75.6); A 2.3.39/1:61 (SD 44.3[4.6]); Dhs 123×3, 124×3; Vbh 183×2, 268×3, 281, 282×2, 302; Kvu 538×5. This concerns the 4 postures (standing, walking, sitting, reclining) (MA 1:128). On these 4 postures, cf M4,20.5 n (SD 44.3) on “just the way I am.”
The Buddha goes for solitary retreat

5 Then in the morning, the Blessed One, having dressed himself and taking his robe and bowl, entered Kosambī for alms. Then the Blessed One, having gone for his almsround and finished his meal of almsfood, set his lodging in order, took his bowl and robe and, while standing, uttered these stanzas:50 [154]

6.2 Parimutthā pāṇḍitā bhāsā
vācā, go, cara, bhānino yāv’ichanti mukhāyāmam
yena nītā na taṁ vidū
When many voices are shouting at once no one considers himself a fool.
Although the sangha is being split,
no one thinks he is at fault.

6.3 Akkocchi māṁ avadhi māṁ
ajīnī māṁ ahāsi me
ye ca taṁ upanayhanti
verāṁ tesāṁ na sammati
‘He abused me, he struck me!
He defeated me, he robbed me!’—
In those who harbour such thoughts, their hatred will never be quelled.

6.4 Akkocchi māṁ avadhi māṁ
ajīnī māṁ ahāsi me
ye ca taṁ nupanayhanti
verāṁ tesūpasammati
‘He abused me, he struck me!
He defeated me, he robbed me!’—
In those who harbour not such thoughts, their hatred will be quelled.

6.5 Na hi verena verāṁ
sammantidha kudācanaṁ
averena ca sammanti
esa dhammo sanantano
For, never is hate by hate ever quelled in this world.
By non-hate is it quelled—
this is the timeless truth.

50 The Vinaya account mentions that the Buddha uttered these stanzas “in the midst of the Sangha” (saṅgha, majhe, V 1:349, 350). However, from Pāliya S (S 22.81) we are told that the Buddha leaves for solitary retreat unnoticed (S 22.81, 2-4/3:94 f). Moreover, the Buddha utters these stanzas while standing [5, 7a]: when admonishing the monks, the Buddha would usually be seated. Apparently, these verses are a soliloquy. On the other hand, it is possible that these verses (not mentioned in the Pāliya S) are uttered saṅgha, majhe before the Buddha leaves unnoticed. At this point, the narrative takes different turns: (1) the immediate events that occur in the monastery are related in Pāliya S (S 22.81/3:94-99); (2) the account of the Buddha’s journey is given here in Upakkilesa S [5 ff], which is preceded by a brief account of the Buddha’s failed efforts to quell the discord [1-4]. All the stanzas that follow occur at V 1:349 f = M 3:154 = J 3:488.
6.6 Pare ca na vijānanti
Mayam ettha yamāmase
ye ca tattha vijānanti
tato sammanti medhāgā
And the others (the foolish) do not recognize\(^{51}\) that we have strifes here;\(^{52}\) yet others (the wise) who recognize this, for them, the quarrels are quelled. \((\text{Dh} \, 6 = \, \text{J} \, 3:212 = \text{Tha} \, 275)\)

6.7 Aṭṭhi-c, chinnā pāṇa, harā gavassa dhana, hārīno
raṭṭham vilumpamānānaṁ

tesam pi hoti sangatī
kasmā tumhākām no siyā
Breakers of bones, takers of life, robbers of cattle, horses and wealth,
those pillaging the country—
even they can work together, why can you not do so, too?

6.8 Sace labhetha nipakāṁ sahāyaṁ
saddhiṁ caram sadhu, vihāri dhīrāṁ abhībhuyya sabbāni parissayāṇi
careyya ten'attamano satiṁā 53If one finds a sensible companion,
a fellow farer, who abides well and wise, then, overcoming all dangers, one should wander with him in joy and mindfulness.

6.9 No ce labhetha nipakāṁ sahāyaṁ
saddhiṁ caram sadhu, vihāri dhīrāṁ rājā'va raṭṭham vijitāṁ pahāya eko care mātaṅga, raṇñe'va nāgo
If one cannot find a sensible companion,
a fellow farer, who abides well and wise,
then, like a king abandoning a conquered kingdom,\(^{54}\)
one should wander alone like an elephant in the Mātaṅga forest.\(^{55}\)

Bālaka, loṇa, kāra, gāma: Bhagu

7 Then the Blessed One, having uttered these verses while standing, went to Bālaka, loṇa, kāra, gāma \([\text{Bālaka salt-makers’ village}]\).\(^{56}\)

7.2 \(^{50}\)Now at that time, \([155]\) the venerable Bhagu\(^{58}\) was residing in Bālaka, loṇa, kāra, gāma. The venerable Bhagu, on seeing the Blessed One coming in the distance, prepared a seat and water for washing the feet. Then the Blessed One sat down on the prepared seat, and while seated, washed his feet.

---

\(^{51}\) At Tha 275, this and the next line tr as “And others do not know | that we come to an end here!” foll DhA

\(^{52}\) Comy gives 2 interpretations; the 1st (followed here): “The ‘others’ (pare), the creators of strife, are those other than the wise. They, creating strife in the midst of the sangha, do not realize: ‘We cease to be, we perish, constantly and surely we are going into the Death’s presence.’ (DhA 1:65,15-17). “Death” here is related to the pun on yama (counsellor of the hells) in yamāmase. Comy’s 2nd interpretation: “The do not realize: ‘Being caught in the grasp (gahaṇa or gāha) of falsehood due to desires and so on, we here, in the midst of the sangha, attempt to worsen strife (yamāmase) and other such conditions.” (DhA 1:66,2-3). Tha 275b follows the 1st of these interpretations (DhA 1:65,15-17), apparently based on a wordplay on Yama, counsellor of the hells (Dh:N 62 n6; Tha:N 174 n275). See also Dh:CP 96 ad 6 n. On Yama, see SD 48.10 (1).

\(^{53}\) The foll 2 stanzas are at V 1:350; M 3:154; Dh 328 f; J 3:488; DhA 1:52. In Khagga, visāṇa S (Sn 45 f), the refrain eko care Mātaṅg’araṇīī ve nāgo (“one should wander alone like an elephant in the Mātaṅga forest”) is replaced by eko care khagga, visāṇa, kappo, “one should wander alone like a rhinoceros.” It is likely that the elephant simile is older than the robbers simile. On the tr of Mātaṅg’araṇīī, see Dh:CP 349 (n on Dh 329).

\(^{54}\) Comy (M 4:206) & Jātaka (J 3:489) allude to Mahā Janaka, the king of Mithilā (J 539) and to Arindama, the king of Benares (J 1:41).

\(^{55}\) Mātaṅga is the name of a bull elephant (MA 4:206). His story is mentioned in Comy on Dh 329-330 (DhA 4:29 f): see DhA 23.7/4:26-31. It is possible that this elephant is Pārīleya himself since they both share the same story of leaving their herd (V 1:352 f = U 4.5; VA 1152; DhA 1.5b/1:59-65, 4.29 f; UA 250). Cf A 4:435.

\(^{56}\) Bālaka, loṇa, kāra, gāma. See Pārīleyya S (S 22.81/3:94-99), SD 6.1 (2).
Then the venerable Bhagu having saluted the Blessed One, sat down at one side. When the venerable Bhagu was seated thus at one side, the Blessed One said this to him:

“I hope you find it bearable, bhikshu. I hope you’re able to keep going, I hope you have no trouble with almsfood.”

“It’s bearable, Blessed One; I’m able to keep going, Blessed One; I’ve no trouble with almsfood, bhante.”

7.3 Then the Blessed One having instructed, inspired, roused and gladdened the venerable Bhagu with a Dharma talk,\(^59\) rose from his seat and left, heading towards Pācīna,vaṁsa(mīga)dāya [the Eastern Bamboo (Deer) Park].\(^60\)

Pācīna,vaṁsa,dāya: Anuruddha, Nandiya and Kimbila\(^61\)

8 \(^62\)Now at that time, the venerable Anuruddha,\(^63\) the venerable Nandiya and the venerable Kimbila were staying in Pācīna,vaṁsa,dāya [the eastern bamboo grove].\(^64\)

8.2 The park-keeper saw the Blessed One coming from afar. Seeing him, he said this to the Blessed One:

“Great recluse,\(^65\) do not enter this park. There are 3 sons of family dwelling here engaged in desiring for their own good.\(^66\) Do not disturb them.”\(^67\)

9 The venerable Anuruddha heard the park-keeper speaking to the Blessed One. Hearing this, he said this to the park-keeper:

---

\(^{57}\) From here on [7-14], as at Cūḷa Gosiṅga S (M 31.1-10/1:205-207). However, the events of Upakkilesa S probably precede the Cūḷa Gosiṅga S. See Intro (1) above.

\(^{58}\) Bhagu. See Intro (4) above & also Pārīleyya S (S 22.81/3:94-99) (2).

\(^{59}\) Dhammiyā katāya sandassetvā samādhapetvā samuṭṭejetvā sampahamīsetvā, “...having instructed (sandassetvā), inspired (samādāpetvā), roused (samuṭṭejetvā) and gladdened (sampahamīsetvā)...with a Dharma talk.”

This action sequence reflects the basic structure of the Buddha’s teaching method: (1) the Dharma is shown; (2) the listener/s are filled with enthusiasm; (3) they are fired with commitment; and (4) they are filled with joy. Comys (eg DA 1:293; UD 242; MA 2:35) explain that by instructing, the Buddha dispels the listener’s delusion; by inspiring him, heedlessness is dispelled; by rousing him, indolence is dispelled; and by gladdening, brings the practice to a conclusion. In short, when we teach Dharma to benefit others, we should do our best to bring instruction, inspiration, motivation and joy to the listener. These 4 qualities are, in fact, the sixth or last of the ideal skills of a Dharma speaker. See SD 11.4 (4) & also L S Cousins, in his review of The Middle Length Discourses of the Buddha (tr. Nānāmoli) in JBE 4 1997:272, where gives a slightly different listing of the above. See also Kalupahana, A History of Buddhist Philosophy, 1992:65-67.

\(^{60}\) Pācīna,vaṁsa(mīga)dāya, see Intro (8). See also Pārīleyya S (S 22.81) + SD 6.1 (2).

\(^{61}\) §§8-14 as at V 1:350-352. There are interesting identical and parallel passages with Cūḷa Gosiṅga S (M 31,2-19/1:206-209): §§8-15 are almost identical to M 31,3-10. It is clear from the Upakkilesa S, which records how the 3 monks strive for liberation, that it is set before the Cūḷa Gosiṅga S, where all 3 monks have attained arhathood.

\(^{62}\) From here (§8) until §15.2, almost as at Cūḷa Gosiṅga S (M 31,2-10,1). SD 44.11, where, however, they are said to be residing at the “Gosiṅga forest grove” (go.sīṅga,vana,dāya) (M 31,1).

\(^{63}\) Anuruddha. See Intro (6) above & also Pārīleyya S (S 22.81/3:94-99), SD 6.1 (2).

\(^{64}\) On this park, see §7.3 n above.

\(^{65}\) This suggests that the park-keeper may be familiar with the Buddha. Cf Cūḷa Go,sīṅga S (M 31,3,2) which omits the mahā here.

\(^{67}\) Clearly here either the park-keeper does not know it is the Buddha, or does not recognize him. On the significance of this, see Lakkhaṇa S (D 30), SD 36.9.
“Friend park-keeper, do not obstruct the Blessed One. He is our teacher, the Blessed One, who has come.”

10 Then, the venerable Anuruddha approached the venerable Nandiya and the venerable Kimbila. Having approached them, he said this to the venerable Nandiya and the venerable Kimbila:

“Come out, bhante! Come out, bhante! Our teacher, the Blessed One, has come!”

Then the venerable Anuruddha, the venerable Nandiya and the venerable Kimbila went out to meet the Blessed One. One took the Blessed One’s bowl and robe, one prepared a seat, one set up water for washing the feet.

10.2 The Blessed One sat down on the prepared seat. Having sat down, he washed his feet. Then the three venerables saluted the Blessed One and sat down at one side.

Sitting thus at one side, the Blessed One said this to the venerable Anuruddha:

“I hope you (three) find it bearable, Anuruddha, bhante. I hope you’re able to keep going, I hope you have no trouble with almsfood.” [156]

“It is bearable, Blessed One. We’re able to keep going, Blessed One. We have no trouble with almsfood, bhante.”

Blending like milk and water

11 “Anuruddha, I hope that you are all dwelling in concord, in mutual joy, without disputing, mixing like milk and water, looking at each other with kindly eyes.”[69]

12 “Certainly, bhante, we are all dwelling in concord, in mutual joy, without disputing, mixing like milk and water, looking at each other with kindly eyes.”

“But how, Anuruddha, are you all dwelling in concord, in mutual joy, without disputing, mixing like milk and water, looking at each other with kindly eyes?”

12.2 ANURUDDHA’S PRACTICE. “Bhante, here I think thus: ‘It is a gain for me! It is a great gain for me, that I am dwelling with such companions in the holy life.’

Bhante, I keep up acts of lovingkindness through deed, both openly and privately, towards these venerables.

Bhante, I keep up acts of lovingkindness through speech, both openly and privately, towards these venerables.

Bhante, I keep up acts of lovingkindness through the mind, both openly and privately, towards these venerables.

[68] Anuruddha, 3 voc pl, lit “Anuruddhas” (as in M:H), ie Anuruddha, Nandiya and Kimbila. This is an example of a multiple vocative, unique to Pali, used in addressing a group by its leader. I have used the original Pali. Also at Nalaka,pāna S (M 68,4.1/1:463), SD 37.4. See Aggañña S (D 27,3), SD 2.9.

[69] The Buddha’s remark (a wish or question actually) here is fully understandable, because he has just left the quarrelsome monks of Kosambī [§§2-4]. Rajah Pasenadi makes a similar remark to the Buddha in Dhamma,cetiya S (M 89,11/2:120 f). This is stock: M 1:206, 398, 3:156; A 1:70, 3:67, 104; S 4:225. Parisā S (A 3.93) uses the rain simile to show how spiritual friendship (defined in the words here) [11] builds up positive qualities in one (A 3.93,5/1:243), SD 6.12 (3).

[70] The foll 3 verses contain the first 3 of the 6 “principles of cordiality” (cha dhammā sārānīyaṁ) given in Kosambīya S (M 48). The remaining 3 are: (4) sharing of gains with virtuous companions in the holy life; (5) compatible high moral virtues; (6) compatible right view and practice (M 48,6/1:322 f, 2:250; D 3:245; A 3:288 f, 5:89; DhsA 294; J 5:382. Cf sārānīyaṁ dhamma,kathan suṇāti, DhA 4:168 & BHS saṁrajaṇiyaṁ dharmaṁ samādāya, Divy 404).

http://dharmafarer.org
Bhante, here I think thus: ‘Why should I not set aside what I wish to do and instead do what these venerables wish to do?’ Then, bhante, I set aside what I wish to do and instead do what these venerables wish to do.”\(^{71}\)

It seems, bhante, that we are of different bodies but of one mind!”\(^{72}\)

12.3 NANDIYA’S PRACTICE. Then the venerable Nandiya, too, said this to the Blessed One:

“Bhante, here we, too, think thus: ‘It is a gain for me! It is a great gain for me, that I am dwelling with such companions in the holy life.’

Bhante, we keep up acts of lovingkindness through deed, both openly and privately towards these venerables.

Bhante, we keep up acts of lovingkindness through speech, both openly and privately towards these venerables.

Bhante, we keep up acts of lovingkindness through the mind, both openly and privately towards these venerables.

Here, bhante, we think thus: ‘Why should I not set aside what I wish to do and instead do what these venerables wish to do?’ Then, bhante, we set aside what we wish to do and instead do what these venerables wish to do.

It seems, bhante, that we are of different bodies but of one mind!

Bhante, this is how we all dwell in concord, in mutual joy, without disputing, mixing like milk and water, looking at each other with kindly eyes.”

12.4 KIMBILA’S PRACTICE. Then the venerable Kimbila, too, said this to the Blessed One:

“Bhante, here we, too, think thus: ‘It is a gain for me! It is a great gain for me, that I am dwelling with such companions in the holy life.’

Bhante, we keep up acts of lovingkindness through deed, both openly and privately towards these venerables.

Bhante, we keep up acts of lovingkindness through speech, both openly and privately towards these venerables.

Bhante, we keep up acts of lovingkindness through the mind, both openly and privately towards these venerables.

Here, bhante, we think thus: ‘Why should I not set aside what I wish to do and instead do what these venerables wish to do?’ Then, bhante, we set aside what we wish to do and instead do what these venerables wish to do.

It seems, bhante, that we are of different bodies but of one mind!

Bhante, this is how we all dwell in concord, in mutual joy, without disputing, mixing like milk and water, looking at each other with kindly eyes.

13 “Sadhu [Excellent]! Sadhu [Excellent]! Anuruddhā! I hope you all dwell diligent, exertive and resolute.” [157]

“Certainly, bhante, we dwell diligent, exertive and resolute.”\(^{73}\)

---

\(^{71}\) So kho ahaṁ bhante sakāṁ cittaṁ nikkhipitvā imesaṁ y’eva āyasantaṁ citassa vasena vattāmi.

\(^{72}\) Nānā hi kho so bhante kāyā, ekaṁ ca pana maṁīne cittan ti.

\(^{73}\) From here on, Cūḷa Gosīṅga S (M 31,10/1:208) takes a different turn. On spiritual friendship, see S 5:2-30; A 1:14-18; It 10. See Meghiya S (A 9.3/4:354-358 = U 4.1/34-37), SD 34.2 (2.1); also see Piya Tan, The Buddha and His Disciples, 2004 ch 5 (on Sāriputta & Moggallāna).
Dwelling together in silence and diligence

13.2 “But, how, Anuruddhā, do you all dwell diligent, exertive and resolute?”

14 “Here, bhante, whichever of us returns first from the almsround in the village, he prepares the seats, sets up water for drinking and for washing, and sets up the refuse bin.

Whichever of us returns last from the almsround in the village, if he wishes, he eats the leftovers.

Or, if he wishes, he would throw them away where there is no greenery or pour them away into water where there is no life. He puts away the seats and the water for drinking and for washing. After washing the refuse bin, he puts it away, and sweeps the refectory.

Whoever notices that the vessels of water for drinking or for washing or for the toilet are low or empty, he sets them up.

14.2 If he is unable to manage them, he would signal another with his hand, and by joining hands, they set them up.

14.3 As such, bhante, there is no cause for us to break into speech.”

14.4 On every fifth day (of the week), bhante, we sit together all night discussing the Dharma.

14.5 This is how, bhante, we dwell diligent, exertive and resolute.”

---

74 The following passage is an abridgement of V 1:157 f (Mahāvagga 4.1-7) where it is stated that the monks were on good terms with one another but they “neither addressed one another nor conversed” (V 1:157). The Buddha speaks against such unwholesome silence and admonishes the monks to communicate with one another. See Araṇa, vibhanga S (M 139), SD 7.8 (2).

75 Evidently, they dwell together observing the rule of silence, as the Buddha admonishes in Ariya Pariyesanā S (M 26): “When you gather together, bhikshus, you should either discuss the Dharma or keep noble silence” (M 26.4/ 1:161). The 2nd jhāna is known as “the noble silence” (ariya, tuṣṭi, bhāva), explains the Kolita S (S 2:273), because within it initial thought and sustained application (thinking and pondering) (vitakka, vicāra) cease, and with their cessation, speech cannot occur. In Kāmabhū S 2 (S 4:293) vitakka and vicāra are called verbal formation (vaci, saṁkhāra), the mental factors responsible for speech. Comy on Ariyapariyesana S says that those who cannot attain jhāna are advised to maintain “noble silence” by attending to their basic meditation subject (MA 2:169). See prev n.

76 “Every fifth day (of the week),” paścimihāsam, ie in addition to the 8th and 14th/15th days, which are the usual days for listening to the Dharma, Nandiya and Kimbila would go to Anuruddha’s residence for Dharma discussion (MA 2:242; KhA 147). In modern terms, this is clearly a Friday (ie once a week). On the full moon and new moon days, the monks recite the Pāṭimokkha (code of monastic rule) and the laity visit the monasteries to listen to the Dharma and to meditate. On the uposatha day of the fortnight —ie the 8th (āṭṭham), the 14th (cāṭuddasi) or 15th (pauṇarāsi) days, and sometimes incl the 5th day (paṇicami)—the laity observe the 8 uposatha precepts (V 1:87, 102; M 1:39, 2:74; A 4:248; Sn 401; Vv 37.11; Thī 31; J 4:1, 5:173, 194, 6:232; Cp 1:10:4; Vism 227 f). On paṇicami, āṭṭhami,cāṭuddasi,paṇṇarasinām uposatha,divasā, see Ujl 192,28. The “extraordinary half or fortnight” (pāṭihāriya, pakkha) is an ancient extra holy day now not observed (AA 2:234; SnA 378; Ujl 2:55; Thī:N 67 f n31). The “eight days” of observance mentioned here probably includes the “extra holy day,” observed during the commentarial times, ie 4 days of observance for each of the 2 fortnights of the moon. See Mahā Parinibbāna S (D 16) @ SD 9 (7b) n on “the monthly 8 observances.”

77 “All night” (sabba, ratti) could mean right through all the 3 watches: 1st watch (6-10 pm), the middle watch (10-2 am) and last watch (2-6 am), or they could sleep from 2-4 am. As at V 1:352. This practice is qu as an example of “timely listening Dharma” (kālena dharmam-s, savanam) in Maṅgala S (Khp 5.9/3* = Sn 265) at KhpA 147 f & SnA 300.
Light and vision of forms

15 “Sadhu! Sadhu! Anuruddhā! But, Anuruddhā, while you were dwelling thus diligent, exertive and resolute, have you attained the superhuman state, dwelling in the comfort that is the distinction in knowledge and vision worthy of the noble ones?”

15.2 “Here, bhante, while we were dwelling diligent, exertive and resolute, we perceived both light and vision of forms. But not long afterwards both the light and the vision of forms disappeared. And we did not penetrate the sign.”

16 “But, Anuruddhā, you should penetrate that sign. Anuruddhā, before I awakened to the supreme awakening, when I was still a bodhisattva, I too perceived both light and vision of forms. But [158] not long afterwards both the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

The 11 mental impurities

16.2 (1) Then, Anuruddhā, it occurred to me:
‘What now is the cause, what is the reason, that the light and the vision of forms disappeared?’
Then it occurred to me:
‘Doubt arose in me, and because of the doubt my concentration fell away.
When my concentration fell away, the light and the vision of forms disappeared.
Now let me act so that doubt would not arise in me again.’
17 Anuruddhā, as I was dwelling diligent, exertive and resolute, I perceived light and vision of forms. But again not long afterwards both the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

78 “The superhuman state,” uttari, manussa, dhamma. While the highest of ordinary human virtues are the 5 precepts, the 10 precepts, the 10 wholesome courses of actions (kusala, kamma, patha) (Samma Diṭṭhi S, M 9,6/1:47; Sāleyyaka S, M 41,12-14/1:288), the virtues of the saints, called “the superhuman states,” include the dhyanas (jhāna), the supernormal knowledge (abhīṣīṇa), and the paths (magga) and fruits (phala) (DA 2:388, 3:817; MA 2:21; AA 1:3:412). Vinaya includes the dhyanas in its definition of uttari, manussa, dhamma (V 3:91, 4:24). On Acelaka Kassapa & Citta the houselord, see SD 45.14 (3.2).

79 “The distinction … of the noble ones” (alam-ariya, rāna, dassana, vīsesa) is often used in the suttas to refer to the higher degrees of spiritual knowledge characteristic of the saints. In Mahā Sīhanāda S (M 12,2/1:68), Comy ad loc says that it means specifically the supramundane path that Sunakkhatta is denying the Buddha (MA 2:21 f). From here on, V 1:352 takes a different turn from Cūla Gosiṅga S (M 31,10.1): see §7.2 above where the parallel starts.

80 Light here refers to the sign (nimitta) preceding the arising of dhyana. See foll n.

81 “We perceive both … forms,” obhāsaṁ c’eva sājānāma dassanaṁ ca riṇānam. Light is perceived before and during dhyana, while vision of forms arises through the divine eye. From here on, the Sutta proceeds differently from Cūla Gosiṅga S (M 31.10/1:207). Comy glosses “light” (obhāsa) as the preliminary light (parikamma’obhāsa) [which MT glosses as the light produced by the access into meditation dhyana, adding that one who gains the fourth dhyana develops the light kasiṇa as the preliminary to attaining the divine eye]. The “visions of form” (dassanaṁ riṇānam) is the seeing of forms with the divine eye (MA 4:207). Anuruddha was later declared by the Buddha as the foremost of the monks who have the divine eye (A 1:23).

82 “You should penetrate the sign,” nimittam paṭivijjhitabbam. M:ÑB has “You should discover the cause for that …” Here “penetrate” means “acquire,” ie, “you should acquire the sign” in order to overcome various mental obstructions: see Analayo, Satipāṭhāna: The direct path to realization, 2003:237 n21. Cf pajinātī: SD 13.1 (3.9.3).

83 These 11 mental impurities (cittassa upakkilesa) are taught to advanced disciples and meditators, whereas the 16 mental impurities given in Vatthūpama S (M 7,3-4/1:36 f) are addressed to the sangha at large. This explains why they are totally different sets. See Intro (3) above.
(2) Then, Anuruddhā, it occurred to me:
‘What now is the cause, what is the reason, that the light and the vision of forms disappeared?’
Then it occurred to me:
Inattention arose in me, and because of inattention my concentration fell away.
When my concentration fell away, the light and the vision of forms disappeared.
Now let me act so that doubt and inattention would not arise in me again.’

18 Anuruddhā, as I was dwelling diligent, exertive and resolute, I perceived light and vision of forms. But again not long afterwards both the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

(3) Then, Anuruddhā, it occurred to me:
‘What now is the cause, what is the reason, that the light and the vision of forms disappeared?’
Then it occurred to me:
Sloth-and-torpor arose in me, and because of sloth-and-torpor my concentration fell away.
When my concentration fell away, the light and the vision of forms disappeared.
Now let me act so that doubt, inattention and sloth-and-torpor would not arise in me again.’

19 Anuruddhā, as I was dwelling diligent, exertive and resolute, I perceived light and vision of forms. But again not long afterwards both the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

(4) Then, Anuruddhā, it occurred to me:
‘What now is the cause, what is the reason, that the light and the vision of forms disappeared?’
Then it occurred to me:
Fear arose in me, and because of fear my concentration fell away.
When my concentration fell away, the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

19.2 PARABLE OF THE MURDEROUS JOURNEY. Suppose, Anuruddhā, a person were to set out on a journey and murderers were to leap out from both sides of him—fear [alarm] would then arise in him on that account.85

So too fear arose in me, and because of fear, my concentration fell away.
When my concentration fell away, the light and the vision of forms disappeared.
‘Now let me [159] act so that doubt, inattention, sloth-and-torpor and fear would not arise in me again.’

20 Anuruddhā, as I was dwelling diligent, exertive and resolute, I perceived light and vision of forms. But again not long afterwards both the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

(5) Then, Anuruddhā, it occurred to me:
‘What now is the cause, what is the reason, that the light and the vision of forms disappeared?’
Then it occurred to me:
Excitement arose in me, and because of excitement my concentration fell away.
When my concentration fell away, the light and the vision of forms disappeared.’

84 Chambhitatta, “trembling, consternation, stupefaction” (DPL); but cf: “Chambhitatta is a state of bodily stiffness in the form of paralysis of the thighs” (Chambhitattan ti āru-thambhaka, sarīrassa chambhita, bhāvam). UA 66

85 PTS ed has ubhato, nidānam, probably thinking of the two murderers. Here the vl tato nidānam reads better.

86 Ubbilla, “elation, excitement, joy” (CPD); “pleasurable excitement” (M:H 3:204 n1). Be uppila which CPD says is wr for ubbila; see also CPD: ubbilla. See DP: uppiḷāpana. This a hapax legomenon, appearing only here although uppiḷāvatutta (vl uppiḷāvatutta) occurs at D 1:3 = M 1:140 = Miln 183; D 1:37; M 1:140. Cf the commentarial ubbila (“perhaps an extracted from ubbilla on the analogy of ussuka: ussukka,” CPD).
20.2 Parable of the Hidden Treasure. Suppose, Anuruddhā, a person seeking the access to hidden treasure, were to find the five accesses all at once,87 excitement would arise in him on that account.

So too excitement arose in me, and because of excitement, my concentration fell away.

When my concentration fell away, the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

‘Now let me act so that doubt, inattention, sloth-and-torpor, fear and excitement would not arise in me again.’

21 Anuruddhā, as I was dwelling diligent, exertive and resolute, I perceived light and vision of forms. But again not long afterwards both the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

(6) Then, Anuruddhā, it occurred to me:

‘What now is the cause, what is the reason, that the light and the vision of forms disappeared?’

Then it occurred to me: ‘Inertia [inaction]88 arose in me, and because of inertia my concentration fell away.

When my concentration fell away, the light and the vision of forms disappeared. Now let me act so that doubt, inattention, sloth-and-torpor, fear, excitement and inertia would not arise in me again.’

22 Anuruddhā, as I was dwelling diligent, exertive and resolute, I perceived light and vision of forms. But again not long afterwards both the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

(7) Then, Anuruddhā, it occurred to me:

‘What now is the cause, what is the reason, that the light and the vision of forms disappeared?’

Then it occurred to me: ‘Excessive effort89 arose in me, and because of excessive effort my concentration fell away.

When my concentration fell away, the light and the vision of forms disappeared.’

22.2 The Quail Parable (1). Suppose, Anuruddhā, a person were to hold a quail tightly with both his hands, it would die then and there.

So too excessive effort arose in me, and because of excessive effort, my concentration fell away.

When my concentration fell away, the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

‘Now let me act so that doubt, inattention, sloth-and-torpor, fear, excitement, inertia and excessive effort would not arise in me again.’

23 Anuruddhā, as I was dwelling diligent, exertive and resolute, I perceived light and vision of forms. But again not long afterwards both the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

(8) Then, Anuruddhā, it occurred to me:

‘What now is the cause, what is the reason, that the light and the vision of forms disappeared?’

Then it occurred to me:

‘Weak effort90 arose in me, [160] and because of weak effort my concentration fell away.

When my concentration fell away, the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

---

87 See Āṭṭhaka,ṇāgara S (M 52) = Dasama S (A 11.17), where “11 doors to the death-free” (amata, dvāra) are found (M 52,15/1:353 f = A 11.17/5:346 f), SD 41.2. These are the 4 dhyanas, the 4 divine abodes (brahma, vihāra), and the first 3 formless attainments used as bases for the development of insight and attainment of arhathood. Cf MA 4:208.

88 “Inertia” (duṭṭhulla), ie bodily inertia (kāya, duṭṭhulla). Comys gloss it as “a state of bodily inaction” (kāyulasīya,bhāvo) (MA 4:202) or “bodily unwieldiness due to food” (bhattam nissāya kāyassa akammaiṇātā) (VbhA 479). See M 1:435, 3:151.

89 Acc’āradhā,viriya = ati + āradhā + viriya, “putting in too much effort.” On the “middle way” in terms of effort, see the parable of the lute (V 1:182; A 3:375).

90 Ati,lina,viriya.
23.2 THE QUAIL PARABLE (2). Suppose, Anuruddhā, a person were to hold a quail loosely with both his hands, it would then fly away.

So too weak effort arose in me, and because of effort, my concentration fell away.

When my concentration fell away, the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

‘Now let me act so that doubt, inattention, sloth-and-torpor, fear, excitement, inertia, excessive effort and weak effort would not arise in me again.’

24 Anuruddhā, as I was dwelling diligent, exertive and resolute, I perceived light and vision of forms. But again not long afterwards both the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

(9) Then, Anuruddhā, it occurred to me:
‘What now is the cause, what is the reason, that the light and the vision of forms disappeared?’

Then it occurred to me:
‘Longing arose in me, and because of longing my concentration fell away.

When my concentration fell away, the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

Now let me act so that doubt, inattention, sloth-and-torpor, fear, excitement, inertia, excessive effort, weak effort and longing would not arise in me again.’

25 Anuruddhā, as I was dwelling diligent, exertive and resolute, I perceived light and vision of forms. But again not long afterwards both the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

(10) Then, Anuruddhā, it occurred to me:
‘What now is the cause, what is the reason, that the light and the vision of forms disappeared?’

Then it occurred to me:
‘Perception of diversity arose in me, and because of perception of diversity my concentration fell away.

When my concentration fell away, the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

Now let me act so that doubt, inattention, sloth-and-torpor, fear, excitement, inertia, excessive effort, weak effort, longing and perception of diversity would not arise in me again.’

26 Anuruddhā, as I was dwelling diligent, exertive and resolute, I perceived light and vision of forms. But again not long afterwards both the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

(11) Then, Anuruddhā, it occurred to me: ‘What now is the cause, what is the reason that the light and the vision of forms disappeared?’

Then it occurred to me:
‘Excessive gazing at forms arose in me, and because of excessive gazing at forms my concentration fell away.

When my concentration fell away, the light and the vision of forms disappeared.

Now let me act so that doubt, inattention, sloth-and-torpor, fear, excitement, inertia, excessive effort, weak effort, longing, perception of diversity, and excessive gazing at forms would not arise in me again.’

---

91 Abhijappā, “aspiration, desire” (CPD). Comy glosses it as “craving” (taṇhā), arising when one has made the light (obhāsa) pervades as far as the deva-world and has seen a host of devas (MA 4:209). The word also occurs at Dhs 1050, Vbh 361.

92 Nānattā, saññā.

93 Aṭṭhājāyattattāṁ…rūpānām. Comy: “When perception of diversity arose, I thought I would attend to one type of form, whether desirable or undesirable. As I did so, excessive gazing upon forms occurred to me.” (MA 4:208)
Abandoning the impurities of the mind

Now, Anuruddhā, having understood that doubt is an impurity of the mind, I abandoned doubt that is an impurity of the mind.

Now, Anuruddhā, having understood that inattention is an impurity of the mind, I abandoned inattention that is an impurity of the mind.

Now, Anuruddhā, having understood that sloth-and-torpor is an impurity of the mind, I abandoned sloth-and-torpor that is an impurity of the mind.

Now, Anuruddhā, having understood that fear is an impurity of the mind, I abandoned fear that is an impurity of the mind.

Now, Anuruddhā, having understood that excitement is an impurity of the mind, I abandoned excitement that is an impurity of the mind.

Now, Anuruddhā, having understood that inertia is an impurity of the mind, I abandoned inertia that is an impurity of the mind.

Now, Anuruddhā, having understood that excessive effort is an impurity of the mind, I abandoned excessive effort that is an impurity of the mind.

Now, Anuruddhā, having understood that weak effort is an impurity of the mind, I abandoned weak effort that is an impurity of the mind.

Now, Anuruddhā, having understood that longing is an impurity of the mind, I abandoned longing that is an impurity of the mind.

Now, Anuruddhā, having understood that perception of diversity is an impurity of the mind, I abandoned perception of diversity that is an impurity of the mind.

Now, Anuruddhā, having understood that excessive gazing at forms [161] is an impurity of the mind, I abandoned excessive gazing at forms that is an impurity of the mind.

Now, Anuruddhā, as I was dwelling diligent, exertive and resolute, I perceived light but did not see forms.

Then I saw forms but I did not perceive light, even for a whole night or a whole day or a whole day and night.

28.2 Then, Anuruddhā, it occurred to me:
‘What now is the cause, what is the reason, that I perceived light but did not see forms; then I saw forms but I did not perceive light, even for a whole night or a whole day or a whole day and night?’

28.3 Then it occurred to me:
‘Whenever I did not attend to the form-sign but attended to the light-sign, I perceive light but do not see forms.
Whenever I did not attend to the light-sign but attended to the form-sign, I see forms but did not perceive light, even for a whole night or a whole day or a whole day and night.’

29 Now, Anuruddhā, as I dwelling diligent, exertive and resolute, I perceived limited light and saw limited forms.

94 “Impurity of the mind,” cittassa upakkileso. The term is also used in Vatthūpama S (M 7.3/1:36 f), where it generally refers to various mental defilements. In Upakkilesa S, upakkilesa refers specifically to the cultivation of concentration. See M:NB 1179 n87.

95 Riipa,nimitta. One pays attention to the forms arising within the range of one’s divine eye (dibba,cakkhu) (MA 4:209).

96 Obhāsa,nimitta. One pays attention to the preliminary reflex of the light (parikamm’obhāsa) (MA 4:209).
And perceived immeasurable light and saw immeasurable forms, even for a whole night, or a whole day, or a whole day and night.

29.2 Then, Anuruddhā, this occurred to me:

‘What now is the cause, what is the reason, that I perceived limited light and saw limited forms; and I perceived immeasurable light and saw immeasurable forms, even for a whole night or a whole day or a whole day and night?’

29.3 Then, Anuruddhā, this occurred to me:

‘Whenever concentration is limited, my eye [vision] is limited, and with a limited eye I perceived limited light and saw limited forms.

Whenever my concentration is boundless, then my eye is boundless.

And with the boundless eye I perceived boundless light and saw boundless forms, even for a whole night or a whole day or a whole day and night.’

30 When Anuruddhā, I understood that doubt is an impurity of the mind,

I abandoned the doubt that is an impurity of the mind.

When Anuruddhā, I understood that inattention is an impurity of the mind,

I abandoned the inattention that is an impurity of the mind.

When Anuruddhā, I understood that sloth-and-torpor is an impurity of the mind,

I abandoned the sloth-and-torpor that is an impurity of the mind.

When Anuruddhā, I understood that fear that is an impurity of the mind,

I abandoned fear, an impurity of the mind.

When Anuruddhā, I understood that inattention is an impurity of the mind,

I abandoned the inattention that is an impurity of the mind.

When Anuruddhā, I understood that sloth-and-torpor is an impurity of the mind,

I abandoned the sloth-and-torpor that is an impurity of the mind.

When Anuruddhā, I understood that excessive effort is an impurity of the mind,

I abandoned the excessive effort that is an impurity of the mind.

When Anuruddhā, I understood that weak effort is an impurity of the mind,

I abandoned the weak effort that is an impurity of the mind.

When Anuruddhā, I understood that longing is an impurity of the mind,

I abandoned the longing that is an impurity of the mind.

When Anuruddhā, I understood that perception of diversity is an impurity of the mind,

I abandoned the perception of diversity that is an impurity of the mind.

Now, Anuruddhā, when I understood that excessive gazing at forms is an impurity of the mind,

I abandoned the excessive gazing at forms that is an impurity of the mind.

30.2 Anuruddhā, with this, it occurred to me:

‘I have abandoned these impurities of the mind. Let me now cultivate concentration in three ways.’

---

97 Paritta obhāsa. Comy explains as paritta,kammaṭṭhāne obhāsaṁ, the light limited to an object of meditation (MA 4:209).

98 Bodhi: “The ‘three ways’ seem to be the first three types of concentration mentioned in the next paragraph, also spoken of as a triad at [D 33.1.10(50)/3:219]. Of these, the first is the first jhāna and the third covers the three higher jhānas of the usual fourfold scheme. The second type of concentration has no place in the fourfold scheme, but appears as the second jhāna in the fivefold division of jhānas expounded in the Abhidhamma Piṭaka. This second jhāna of the fivefold scheme is attained by those who cannot overcome initial application and sustained application simultaneously but must eliminate them successively.” (M:NB 1340 n1195). See also M:H 3:208 n3. In other words, the “three ways” refer to the 4 form dhyanas in their various forms. See A 1:91, 4:300 f, Vism 85. The canonical list of dhyana factors (jhān’āṅga) are as follows:
Then, Anuruddhā,
I cultivated concentration
with initial application and sustained application.
I cultivated concentration
without initial application but with sustained application only.
I cultivated concentration
without initial application and without sustained application.
I cultivated concentration
with zest.
I cultivated concentration
without zest.
I cultivated concentration
accompanied with pleasure. 100
I cultivated concentration accompanied by equanimity. 101

When, Anuruddhā,
I had cultivated concentration
with initial application and sustained application;
I had cultivated concentration
without initial application but with sustained application only;
I had cultivated concentration
without initial application and without sustained application;
I had cultivated concentration
with zest.
I had cultivated concentration
without zest.
I had cultivated concentration
accompanied with pleasure.
I had cultivated concentration
accompanied by equanimity—

the knowledge and vision arose in me:
‘Unshakable is my liberation! This is my last birth! There is no more rebirth here (for me).’ 102

The Blessed One said this. Satisfied, the venerable Anuruddha rejoiced 103 in the Blessed One’s word. 104

— evām —

1st dhyana: initial thought (vitakka), sustained application (vicāra), zest (pītī), joy (sukha), one-pointedness of mind (ekaggattā)
2nd dhyana: zest, joy, one-pointedness of mind.
3rd dhyana: joy, one-pointedness of mind.
4th dhyana: equanimity (upekkhā), one-pointedness of mind. (M 1:40)

99 In this section, Comy explains that “the concentration with zest” (sappitiko pi samādhi) is the two lower dhyanas; “the concentration without zest” (nippitiko pi samādhi), the two higher dhyanas; “the concentration accompanied by pleasure (sāta), the three lower dhyanas; “the concentration accompanied by equanimity,” the 4th dhyana (MA 4:209; AA 2:153). PTS omits sāta, sahagato pi samādhi bhāvito ahosi found in other eds.
100 “With pleasure,” sāta, sahagato. Here said in reference to “joy” (sukha). MA 4:209 says that this “pleasure” belongs to the 3rd and 4th dhyanas; but AA 2:153 says that sāta, sukhā is the happiness of the first 3 dhyanas, while upekkhā, sukhā is the happiness of the 4th dhyana. At Vism 85 sāta is replaced by sukhā. This Pali sentence here omitted in PTS ed.
101 “Equanimity,” upekkhā. Comy says that this belongs to the 4th dhyana in the fourfold system, and to the fifth in the fivefold system” (MA 4:209).
102 Comy: The Buddha cultivated the 3 types of mental concentrations [30] in the last watch of the night of which awakening under the Bodhi tree (MA 4:209). The preceding passage and this one clearly attest to the fact that the Buddha attained mental dhyana (jhāna) and then won awakening.
103 “Joyfully approved,” attamanā...abhinandum.
104 Despite the Buddha’s instructions to Anuruddha, there is no mention of his awakening. This is only mentioned in (Arahatta) Anuruddha S (S 3.128) when Sāriputta gives an instructive feedback on Anuruddha’s meditation problems, which leads, in due course, to his awakening: see S 3.128 (SD 19.4). Also connected with his awakening is Anuruddha Mahā, vitakka S (A 8.30), SD 19.5.
Bibliography

Analayo, Samanera

Brahmavamso, Ajahn

Hick, John

Robinson, Richard H